Young Mother Badly Injured in Plane Crash Keeps Baby Safe

SEATTLE, Wash. AP - "Her courage and initiative saved our baby's life," says the husband of a young mother who managed to keep her 2-month-old baby and herself alive for two days in a plane wreckage on a cold, snowy mountain.

Loren Little, 24-year-old University of Washington medical student, spoke with pride as he told of the ordeal his wife, Karla, 25, underwent to save herself and their daughter, Laurie.

Mrs. Little's father and stepmother died in the crash on the snow-covered side of 9,671-foot Mt. St. Helens.

Mrs. Little suffered a broken back, broken ribs, a collapsed lung and frostbitten feet. Doctors reported she was resting comfortably in a hospital today. Her daughter has only a bruised forehead.

Little said his wife, who was rescued Saturday, recalled the ordeal clearly.

It began when Mrs. Little and her daughter were picked up in a rented plane by her father, Grant Erickson, 49, an executive of a radio supply company in Sioux Falls, S.D., and his wife.

They planned to fly to Norwalk, Calif., for the golden wedding anniversary of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Little.

"I was supposed to go with them," Little said. "At the last minute I changed my mind."

Flying south toward Portland, Ore., Thursday the four ran into heavy weather. Mrs. Little thinks a wingtip struck the rocky side of the mountain.

Erickson crash-landed the craft on a ledge at the 5,500-foot level. He and his wife were killed.

Little, describing his father-in-law as a "very cautious pilot, a sensible flier," noted that the last reports from the plane had its altitude as 8,500 feet. He believes Erickson fought to bring the crippled craft to its crash landing at a much lower altitude, "probably saving the life of my wife and child."

The young husband flew with the search planes, refusing to abandon hope through a long Friday and into Saturday afternoon.

Inside the broken plane, Little's wife, paralyzed below the waist, cuddled and nursed her baby.

Vainly through the long hours she tried to reach a bag containing supplemental food. She did manage to reach two baby blankets, wrap Laurie in one and stuff the other in a broken window to keep out windblown snow.

Rocks kept falling from above, bouncing and clattering on the wreckage.

Thursday she could hear the search planes. Friday she saw them but had no way or strength to signal. Finally, Saturday afternoon, a helicopter spotted the broken plane.

She asked the first rescuer, a paramedic, to "get the food and feed the baby."

Mother and infant were evacuated by helicopter to a hospital in Longview, Wash. There Little was reunited with his daughter and his wife, who was groggy from pain and exhaustion and had forgotten Loren had not been aboard the plane.

"She opened her eyes and looked at me for about 15 seconds," said Little. "Then she said, 'I thought you were dead.' "

Four Weekend Highway And Farm Fatalities

A West Memphis, Ark., man was killed Saturday night in a highway accident near Dudley, in Stoddard county, and two men were electrocuted late Sunday morning in a farm accident when an irrigation boom struck a high line. A second highway fatality occurred early Saturday morning.

John McGee, 48, and Riley Harris Jr., 19, both of Holcomb, were electrocuted at 11 a.m. Sunday, while working on a farm three miles south of Clarkton, on the Jack Rollins farm.

They were moving an irrigation boom, when it struck a 7200-volt high line of the Ark-Mo. Power Company. Riley Harris Sr. was driving a tractor and Reggie Skaggs was riding on the trailer, with John McGee holding the tongue of the trailer when the boom came into contact with the highline. Both bodies were taken to the Landess Funeral Home.

In an accident Saturday at 7 p.m., six miles southeast of Advance on route 91, a 1962 Oldsmobile, driven by Charles Wagoner, Sr., 49, Oran, failed to make a curve at a high rate of speed and struck a concrete abutment.

He received a fractured jaw, cuts on the scalp and possible head injury, and was taken to a Cape hospital.

Rex Tucker, 23, Caruthersville, was killed, when his 1952 van truck was overturned and landed on him. The accident occurred three miles south of Caruthersville on route Y at 1:40 p.m. Saturday.

A second vehicle, a 1954 Chevrolet, driven by Herman Foreman, 21, Caruthersville, and two passengers, were injured in the accident. The cars entered the intersection at the same time.

Injured were Lawrence Wigginton, 23, and Dorothy Wigginton, 17, both of Caruthersville, passengers in the Foreman car. Lawrence received cuts on the forehead, and Dorothy received cuts on her forehead, lips and eye. The driver of the Chevrolet had cuts on his face and arms.

The body of Tucker was taken to the Smith Funeral Home, Caruthersville.

A 1961 station wagon, driven by Charles Pscheidell, 53, Stickney, Ill., was arrested for careless and reckless driving, when his car left the road one mile north of Hayti, on highway 61, Saturday afternoon.

Stroup Warns About Seed Peddlers

By TOM B. STROUP

It has been called to our attention that seed peddlers have been operating in the area.

Out of area seed salesmen sometimes come into an area to sell "so called unavailable" varieties that are superior to local grown varieties.

One seed salesman has been selling farmers a contract for Statler wheat seed for September delivery. He is asking for a $1 per bushel deposit with the remaining $4.95 per bushel due on delivery of the wheat.

Statler wheat is being grown in the area for certification and will be available this year locally. The price will be considerably under the $5.95 quoted by the "out-of-the area salesman."

We warn farmers to be on the lookout for these type of salesmen.

Statler wheat has not out yielded other varieties by 10 bu. per acre. Although it has out yielded the other varieties some, it is not that much superior.

Check with your local seed dealers and your Extension Centers for other information on wheat variety trials and recommended varieties.

Cape Gets Grant For Airport

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Federal Aviation Agency has approved a grant of $891,000 for improvements at Cape Girardeau's Municipal Airport which will allow construction of a 6500-foot runway.

The sum will match $880,000 in municipal bonds for airport improvements approved by voters several months ago.

The sum is $49,000 less than the city had originally asked, but more than had originally been granted. When a lesser sum was announced, plans were made to reduce runway width from 150 feet to 100 feet and to reduce the thickness of the concrete. Both of these now will be restored in planning.

The runway will be of sufficient length and width to accommodate new DC 9 aircraft to be placed in service by Ozark Air Lines which serves the city.

Astronomers believe there are at least 200 billion stars in the vicinty of the earth.

Magazine Publisher Receives Soviet Photos

ST. LOUIS, Mo., AP -- The publisher of a small astronomy magazine was apparently selected by the Soviet Union to receive what may be the first full-disc photographs of earth taken from outer space.

The pictures, taken from a Russian communications satellite 25,000 miles away from earth were received last week by Donald Zahner of St. Louis, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said Saturday.

Zahner describes himself as "a basement astronomer." He is a publisher of the review of popular astronomy - a technical magazine with a circulation of 10,000.

Zahner said information he received from the Novosti Press Agency in Moscow said the pictures were taken on May 30 from the Molniya Lightning I satellite.

Quoting Georgi Colyshev, a Soviet hydrometerological service scientist, the press agency said, "It is for the first time that man can clearly see the vast spaces of our planet from such a great height."

The Post-Dispatch said American Tyros and Nimbus weather satellites have taken pictures of earth from 100 to 800 miles in outer space.

The newspaper said Zahner told them the pictures, taken with different camera systems, had been authenticated by U.S. government officials and Dr. Gerald Kuiper, director of the lunar and planetary laboratory of the University of Arizona in Tucson.

The Novosti Press Agency said the full-disc picture shows a sunlit part of the Northern Hemisphere from Western Siberia in the east to North America in the west and from the North Pole to the Indian Ocean and the Sahara Desert in the south.

A large-scale segment picture shows a more detailed view of cloud distribution over the North Atlantic and western part of the Arctic Ocean. Light areas in both photos denote clouded areas.

Zahner said he thinks he received the photos from the Soviet Embassy in Washington because of an article printed last year in his magazine concerning the 100th anniversity of the Russian Pulkova observatory.

"It is our opinion that Soviet officials were pleased with our treatment of this article and ultimately selected our magazine for the exclusive publication of these first photographs," Zahner told the Post-Dispatch.

SEATO: LEAKY UMBRELLA

Military and diplomatic representatives of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) met in Canberra, Australia today.

AS A MILITARY ALLIANCE, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) is something less than what it says it is. With the exception of Pakistan, it is true, all SEATO's Asian members have made military commitments to the war in Viet Nam. But when you have said that you have not said very much.

Actually, the SEATO pact is at least a misnomer. Of its eight members -- the United States, Britain, France, Pakistan, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, and the Philippines--only the last two are really Southeast Asian countries.

Australia has a task force in Viet Nam of some 4,500 men, with their own base and logistic support units. New Zealand is making a comparable contribution. This kind of demonstration is probably traceable less to SEATO obligations that to enlightened self-interest.

FRANCE has been an inactive member of SEATO for several years. The French thwarted any SEATO action for the defense of Laos at a meeting in Bangkok in 1961. Laos was removed from the protection of the leaky SEATO umbrella by the 1962 Geneva agreement.

After much pressure, France in 1964 agreed not to file a dissent and merely abstained from the SEATO pledge to South Viet Nam. Britain and the United States are expected not to ask France to leave the SEATO Ministerial Council when it meets in Canberra this month. But representatives of Thailand and the Philippines may complain about the presence of a French observer. Both governments have told the United States that they regard the French presence as a security risk.

Differences over policy among the United States, Britain, and France have kept SEATO from ever being an Asian NATO. As an entity, SEATO has scarcely flexed a muscle in the dozen years of its existence. Now French obstructionism appears threatening to NATO, but at least in the Atlantic Alliance the spirit of cooperation -- excluding France -- is greater than in SEATO.

COOPERATION in the Pacific, fortunately, is not limited to SEATO. Earlier this month, at a conference in Seoul, Japan joined with eight other Asian nations to form the Asian and Pacific Council (ASPAC), committed at the moment only to political, economic, and social cooperation. The grouping is not markedly anti-Communist. The door is open to neutrals. Nevertheless, member nations have privately discussed a possible transformation into a defense organization.

Aside from Australia and New Zealand -- and Japan -- other founding ASPAC nations are South Korea, Thailand, the Philippines, Nationalist China, Malaysia, and South Viet Nam. Laos attended the organizational meetings as an observer. Indonesia is considering entrance into ASPAC as well as into the revived Association of Southeast Asia, which comprises Malaysia, the Philippines, and Thailand.

Australia and New Zealand are linked militarily with Britain in the ANZAM agreement -- Australia, New Zealand and Malaya. The United States in addition to SEATO is covered by the 1951 ANZUS pact -- Australia, New Zealand, the U. S.

Australia and New Zealand, according to T. B. Millar, defense expert with the Australian National University, look to the distant time when "they will need no protecting, because of the stability and friendship of their Asiatic neighborhood." In the meantime, the American umbrella, holes and all, and a good deal of self-help are providing a precarious security in the Pacific.

FAISAL COMES TO CALL

Faisal Ibn Abdul Aziz al Saud, monarch of Saudi Arabia, will arrive in the United States on a state visit today.

KING FAISAL is not one of President Gamal Abdel Nasser's favorite characters. The rulers of Saudi Arabia and of the United Arab Republic are both Arabs and both Moslems, but there they part company. Each wants to become leader of the Middle East, and each is going about it in a different way.

Faisal seems intent on forging a loose federation of Islamic countries, whether Arab or not. If Faisal has his way, the Arab countries would align themselves with Iran, Turkey, Afghanistan and Pakistan, all of which are Moslem but non-Arab states.

Nasser's approach is more secular. Stressing socialism and ethnic unity or Pan-Arabism, the U. A. R. President has the support of leftist Syria, Algeria and Republican Yemen. Socialism and Islam, however, are not much more compatible than oil and water. Riots in several Egyptian villages last September were blamed on agitation by the Moslem Brotherhood, a fanatical religious group which opposes many of Nasser's Socialist policies.

FAISAL, who arrives in Washington today, is no stranger to the United States. He first came to this country in 1943 as a member of the royal party calling on President Roosevelt. Two years later, he headed the Saudi delegation at the United Nations conference in San Francisco. Faisal also led delegations to the U. N. General Assembly in 1947 and 1952, and visited Washington on two subsequent occasions for talks with Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy.

Saudi Arabia has begun cautiously to enter the 20th century since Faisal became king in 1963. While virtually all women remain in purdah, a few girls' schools have been opened. Jidda and Riyadh, the capital, now have television, although kissing scenes -- even those involving Mickey and Minnie Mouse -- are taboo. No thief has had his hand cut off in more than a year, and no adulteress has been stoned to death in six years.

This represents progress in a country that seemed irretrievably feudal only a decade ago. And the credit belongs almost exclusively to Faisal. By curbing the extravagance of the vast royal family, he erased the national debt in short order and embarked on an internal development program. Roads, water and agriculture were assigned top priority.

BUT FOREIGN AFFAIRS clearly are Faisal's first love. Earlier this year he visited Jordan and Pakistan, presumably to sound out sentiment on his scheme for "Islamic solidarity." His forthcoming talks with President Johnson probably will center on the Yemeni civil war, which in effect is a test of strength between Faisal and Nasser.

When it comes to charisma, Faisal need yield nothing to Nasser, the idol of the Egyptian masses. According to Peter Mansfield of the London Sunday Times, the king "has great personality and poise; for star quality, he is undoubtedly among the top 10 of the world's leaders." Faisal already has assurances of American support in the event of an armed U.A.R. attack on Saudi Arabia. A display of star quality in Washington could result in reaffirmation of that pledge.

Since man's emergence from the cave, technical advancement has invariably increased both the quantity and quality of employment and vastly bettered conditions of life for people generally. But many authorities have argued that computerized automation has introduced a new dimension and with the capability of sensing changing requirements and adjusting without human intervention could do away with the need for human supervision and labor.

A recent issue of U.S. News & World Report poses two questions: "'Are machines really throwing men out of work? Is automation the reason U.S., in its biggest boom, still have relatively high unemployment?"

In answering these questions, U.S. News quotes a recent address on "Automation and Jobs" by Dr. Yal Brozen, professor in the Graduate School of Business at the University of Chicago. He states flatly that automation does not create unemployment. In elaborating on this point, he observes that: "It may seem paradoxical to argue that automation causes displacement but does not cause unemployment. Many observers point to specific persons unemployed as a result of this phenomenon. They fail, however, to point to the unemployed who found jobs because of automation. They fail to recognize those who would have joined the jobless if new technology had not been developed. . . . the total number unemployed is smaller today than it would have been without automation, given the present wage structure."

Using an instance in the railroad industry, Dr. Brozen illustrates the job displacement, job creating effect of electronically operated computer controlled railroad classification yards. The Conway yard now in operation on the Pennsylvania Railroad, permits much more rapid classification of cars and has resulted in the movement of the same amount of freight with the equivalent of 13,000 fewer freight cars. The result -- a net saving in capital investment in railroad equipment amounting to nearly $70 million and the displacement of two hundred men. But lower costs permitted lowering of freight rates resulting in an increase in business for the railroad. Approximately 150 men and $5 million in capital were reabsorbed in other railroad departments.

Dr. Brozen concludes that, "A net displacement of 50 men occurred along with the release of over 60 million dollars in capital. The additional supply of capital made available to other industries increased the number of jobs available by about 400. . ." And it is unquestionably true that in situations where wages have been raised to artifically high levels above what would have been established under free market conditions, automation has been the alternative to disastrous unemployment.

What opportunities will there be for unskilled labor? Charles E. Silberman, writing in a recent issue of Fortune magazine, states that "Because it may actually be easier to mechanize or automate clerical, managerial, and professional work than the kinds of blue-collar work that still remain, current discussions of the labor market may be exaggerating the future demand for professional and technical workers and underestimating the future demand for blue-collar workers." It is becoming apparent that jobs may change while the level of skill required to perform them remains the same.

It is yet too early to discern the structure of employment that automation will finally bring. But is now apparent that early predictions concerning the obsolescence of man were not warranted. The human brain and hand are the most responsive and versatile control and manipulative devices ever created -- they are not to be replaced soon.

ANTIBIOTIC PIRATES

One of this country's leading producers of prescription drugs recently sent a letter to every doctor in the United States announcing that it had reduced prices to pharmacies for a number of antibiotics that are in wide use.

However, it also said, the prices are not competitive with those of certain imported drugs of the same nature. And thereby hangs a sorry tale.

The imported drugs involved are an example of industrial piracy. They are a direct infringement on U.S. patents, on U.S. research and on costly U.S. achievement.

So the letter to the doctors went on to say: "We can emphatically state that if we are to continue to spend millions of dollars a year on drug research; if we are to pay American wage scales to the people in our plants producing our drugs; if we are to maintain a sales and marketing organization to promote to you the fruits of our research in keen competition with others in our industry in a free enterprise system; if we are to pay very significant sums by way of federal, state and local taxes -- if we are to do all these things and at the end of the year's activity turn over a little better than four cents to our stockholders for every dollar of our sales by way of a modest return on their investment, then we will never be in a position to compete with antibiotic pirates who contribute nothing to the development of a drug and find their haven in a country that does not give any recognition to drug patents; who pay wages and offer working conditions which are substandard in comparison to those in this country and; finally, who contribute nothing in the way of taxes to support our democratic institutions."

Enough said! In the light of these undeniable facts, do the drugs produced by the foreign pirates seem "cheap"?

It wasn't long after the town grocer gave his beautiful teenage daughter a job as clerk in his store that the local wolves began dropping by almost daily with requests for items stocked on the highest shelves, since each time the pretty little thing had to climb up a ladder to fill their orders, they were assured a spectacular view. Being as naive as she was attractive, the daughter didn't catch on; she tried rearranging the stock a few times, but no matter how she planned it, her male customers always seemed to ask for the items she put at the top. One day an elderly gent happened to enter the store while a contingent of these young cads was sending the poor girl up and down the ladder, each one in turn ordering a loaf of raisin bread from the top shelf. Hoping to save herself an additional trip while still aloft on her eighth successive climb to the same height, the girl called down to the senior citizen, "Is yours raisin, too?"

"Nope," said the old-timer. "But it's twitchin' a mite."

EUROPE IN A NEW ROLE

When the 20th century began, every fifth person in the world was a European. Sixty years later, the ratio was one out of seven. By the year 2000, only one out of 10 persons in this crowded world will live in Europe.

These statistics are not so much a measure of the "decline of the West" as of its eclipse.

It is not that Europe's population is stagnant. Excluding the Soviet Union, it stands at some 430 million today and is expected to increase to 600 million by the end of the century. Total world population by then, however, will have soared to six billion.

Both the present and projected populations of Europe far exceed those of either the United States or the U.S.S.R. Yet even considered as a whole, the power and influence of the continent which once governed the affairs of the world rank well behind those of either the giant of the East or of the West. This is true even in science and technology, two things which once transformed Europe and in turn made her midwife to the birth of the modern world.

In 1962, says Science magazine, the United States spent nearly twice as much of its gross national income on scientific research and development as Europe. In that year the United States and U.S.S.R. had more than 400,000 scientists and engineers at work while Europe had 150,000.

Adding to this imbalance, the United States absorbs about five per cent of the cream of Europe's yearly output of scientists and engineers -- the so-called "brain drain."

In a recent year, West European countries paid five and a half times as much for rights to use U.S. patents as Americans paid Europeans.

Europe, of course, cannot yet be considered as a whole, despite the beginning steps taken by its major nations toward economic, if not political, unity. Old nationalistic barriers to the free interflow of people and ideas remain the greatest obstacles to the continent's realizing its full potential in the last half of the 20th century.

WORDS AND MUSIC

It will certainly be no "long hot summer" for those young Americans who, as they vacation over our beautiful land, speak and sing for freedom. They are sure to find a very special satisfaction in turning their travels into tours for freedom. And one of the rich rewards they can expect to reap is a crop of new friends.

People of all ages and stations in life are attracted by the sight and sound of young people raising their voices in speech and song on behalf of American ideals. Patriotism is not out of date so far as the youth of America are concerned. Certain it is that the example they set will inspire others.

The purpose of the young vacationeers for freedom is completely serious, but the carrying out of that purpose is as much fun as any good game. Travel itself is fun, of course, especially for youth. And the pleasure is multiplied when the young travelers speak their piece for freedom and raise their clear voices in singing the songs of patriotism.

They will be heard. In a time of national trial, most Americans are sick and tired of speeches and fake folk songs that sound a theme of hopelessness and hate. Americans are not by nature either haters or hopeless. The positive approach of patriotic youth will have a powerful appeal for most of our citizens.

American youth is on the move this summer -- and moving in the right direction. Adults have a great opportunity to encourage and assist the young travelers who deplore DeGaulle and use their vacations to help spread freedom's message. HLH.

Hoffa Planning to Rewrite Teamsters' Constitution So He Can Call National General Strike.

Washington, D. C.: -- Jimmy Hoffa must have thrown three coins in the Fontaine -- bleau -- a Miami Beach hotel which oozes a culture to which today's teamsters' leadership has enthusiastically grown accustomed. Hoffa has returned there to direct -- and that word is carefully chosen -- the massive teamsters' quinary convention.

For Jimmy, "the kid" or "the caliph" or "the champ" (depending on the intimacy of the particular convention delegation), it is all work and no play.

This is Hoffa's most vital convention-- not because he may next convene in a federal "pen" -- but because he is preparing to reach for industrial power achieved by any civilian in the free world.

Hidden in the 125 resolutions being prepared by the committee for action at the 19th Teamsters' Convention are several constitutional changes which could shake the land.

They are, in effect, intended of labor men, should they ever follow him, the mechanism with which to call a general strike.

They could decide the day the nation shall stand still.

Furthermore, if Hoffa's strategem works out, it will all be very legal. From his special command post in the Fontainebleau, Hoffa will make certain that the 2,112 delegates over at the convention auditorium vote unanimously for a constitutional change which will give him the actual power over all teamsters' strikes.

After the constitution is rewritten in Miami Beach, Hoffa will have the authority to approve or veto any stoppage called by any one of the teamsters' 837 locals. He will grant approval, or will ban a walkout, depending on whether the local teamsters' union is in the "coordinated front."

What Hoffa wants is that each local coordinate its employer contracts so they expire on the same day. Then he would have that day coincide with the expiration of contracts signed by other teamsters' locals in every city. This common expiration date would match that of other regions.

Since Hoffa has some industry - wide contracts, he would have all locals in the same industry "expire" their contracts on the same day.

Thus he would weave a nationwide fabric of labor - management pacts covering whole chunks of the country and vast industries -- such as construction.

On the theory that no law would be broken if the teamsters quit en masse, shouting, "No contract, no work," Hoffa could shut down entire cities, combinations of contiguous states, or an industry -- say, milk deliveries or food and vegetables trucking.

Naturally, many regional teamster officials aren't dashing up to Hoffa's suite, quill in hand to sign over authority for the calling of local strikes. So it will take some changes in the teamsters' constitution to give the General President the power to force uniform contracts and expiration dates.

Your money is as safe as though you were buying part of the Federal Reserve Bank if you wager that Hoffa will have his new constitution. But that for "Jimmy" is just the beginning.

For some time now he has been talking with fairly powerful labor leaders in other fields.

His arguments are simple: Have your contracts expire on the same day as ours. Then when you come to us, we can help you legally. We'll be able to beat the ban on secondary boycotts.

Furthermore, Hoffa states that the time has come to give the U. S. employers a dose of what the French and Italian unions give their adversaries -- shut down most of the nation for 24 or 48 hours; idle entire industries; black out whole cities, transit, power and fuel deliveries et al.

This is the development to observe at the coming behemoth conclave. For behind Hoffa is a treasury of liquid millions, assets of $50 million, and a new dues structure which will bring the National Headquarters almost $30 million annually.

With such funds Hoffa can buy more airplanes for his organizers; go into the factories in the field (citrus and vegetable ranches); unionize everything from filling stations to sheriffs' headquarters; beat the drums for unionization of professional football players and throw considerable weight around amongst some mighty nervous congressmen.

All this he can do with peace of mind. There will be no opposition. Maybe just a rebel yell or two. But all his vice presidents are going down the line with him.

The only line he'll cross alone, should it come to that, would be the threshold to a cell.

Meanwhile, first things first. Power, Hoffa reckons, does not come before a fall.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- There was great human drama behind the spectacle of the former assistants of Sen. Tom Dodd, sitting all alone, one by one, at the Senate Ethics Committee witness table while a battery of Wall Street lawyers attempted to tear down their testimony.

Dodd's attorneys are Cahill, Gordon, Reindel and Ohl, who represent Standard Oil, RCA, and some of the biggest corporations in the United States. Even attorneys have been on hand to defend Dodd, four of them sitting at the witness table, three in the front row just behind, unknown to the public, passing notes up to chief attorney John Sonnett.

The public sees much of this. But what it does not see and can never fully realize is the soul - searching that Dodd's former staff members went through before they made the break with their boss. Also the public does not know the sacrifices they have made financially through loss of work.

There was strong indignation among other senators at first, especially friends of Sen. Dodd's, that any senator's staff should use his files against him. Latterly there has been a feeling on the part of many senators that if they were violating their oath of office they could not blame those close to them for informing regarding their activities.

The laws of most states require that anyone who witnesses a crime must report that crime. The Internal Revenue laws also provide for rewards to encourage informants to report on erring taxpayers.

OUT OF WORK

It was after the difficulty decision by Dodd's staff to break with him that their troubles began.

James Boyd, his former administrative assistant, has been out of work for months. For a time he served on the staff of the House Public Works Committee. But when Speaker John McCormack learned of this he asked Rep. George Fallon of Baltimore to abolish Boyd's job. He has been out of work ever since.

Mrs. Marjorie Carpenter, Dodd's former secretary, at first got a position with the civil rights committee of the American Bar Association, but resigned when she felt that her testimony in the Dodd case might be embarrassing to the committee.

Later she was employed by the law firm of Arnold and Porter, informing them in advance that she was involved in the Dodd case and doubtless would be called upon to testify.

However, Sen. Dodd learned where she was working and phoned a member of the Arnold and Porter firm to protest. Mrs. Carpenter was promptly fired.

Miss Terry Golden, another member of Dodd's secretarial staff, was employed by Chief Judge David Bazelon of the U. S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia, but was dropped. Miss Golden is now keeping secret where she is employed for fear pressure will be brought on her present employer. Other former members of Dodd's staff are also being silent regarding their present employment.

Boyd and Mrs. Carpenter have been without jobs or any income during much of the spring. This they knew was one of the hazards they faced before they made the decision to secure the evidence regarding the senator's unethical conduct.

SPACE PROBLEMS

At a recent hearing, the House Appropriations Committee was listening to evidence about spacetrack, which maintains surveillance on over 1,800 objects that have been shot into orbit.

"Is there really a garbage problem up there at this stage of the game?" asked Rep. Dan Flood, D-Pa.

"Not in the sense of danger of a collision, but in keeping track of what is up there," replied Alexander H. Flax, assistant secretary of the air force.

"Why do you believe there is no danger?" inquired Flood.

"Because of the tremendous amount of volume that these 1,800 objects are disposed in," said Flax. "It is like the probability of stepping on a flea in Grand Central Station. It would happen, but it is highly unlikely."

KENNEDY CALLING LONG

At the time Sen. Ed Long, Democrat of Missouri, was investigating wire tapping and tracing part of it back to the justice department when Bobby Kennedy was attorney general, Sen. Russell Long, Democrat of Louisiana, got a telephone call.

His secretary announced the call in advance with: "Sen. Robert Kennedy of New York is calling."

When Sen. Kennedy got on the line he said:

"Sen. Long, I must take issue with you on what you've been saying about my work as attorney general."

And Kennedy proceeded at some length to object to the wire - tapping charges.

Finally Sen. Long interrupted.

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Sen. Long of Louisiana. "I haven't said anything about you and the justice department. I don't know anything about these wiretapping charges."

"Aren't you Sen. Long?" asked Kennedy.

"I'm Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana," was the reply.

"Oh, you're the nice Long," said Sen. Kennedy.

"Which Sen. Kennedy are you?" asked Sen. Long.

Mrs. Wendell Lee Young

Sharon Ann Jackson Is June Bride of Wendell Lee Young

On the evening of Saturday, June 18, Miss Sharon Ann Jackson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zelbert T. Jackson, 707 East Kathleen, became the bride of Wendell Lee Young, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Adell Young, Jackson, Tenn.

The Rev. Nick Harris, cousin of the groom, from the Calvary Baptist church, Humboldt, Tenn., and the Rev. James Hackney officiated at the double ring ceremony in the First Baptist church.

CHURCH DECORATIONS

The altar was graced with two arrangements of majestic yellow and white daisies and four candelabrum entwined with greenery and white bows and holding glowing white tapers. A background arch of twelve tapers and greenery enhanced the setting.

WEDDING MUSIC

Preceding the ceremony Miss Lyn Farris, former college roommate of the bride, presented pre-nuptial organ selections and accompanied Miss Shirley Altom, Sunday school teacher of the bride, as she sang "I Love Thee" preceding the ceremony and "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte as the bride and groom knelt at the prieu dieu for the benediction.

GIVEN BY FATHER

To the strains of the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin", the bride entered the sanctuary on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The former Miss Jackson wore a pencil slim floor-length gown of imported silk organza and imported French rose-point lace. The scooped neckline was edged with French cording. The lace was used as a cardinal cape effect and extended in front to the empress waist forming a V effect. A very full train of organza swept to a chapel length. Long sheer sleeves of the organza formed lily points over the hands and were closed with tiny self-covered buttons. The front of the bodice was etched with pearl and sequin embroidery.

She wore a double tiara of seed pearls which secured the elbow-length, three-tiered French imported veil of illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of white majestic daisies centered with a yellow-throated orchid and long white streamers tied in many lovers' knots. The traditional something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue theme was carried out in her accessories.

BRIDE'S ATTENDANTS

Preceding the bride down the aisle was little Miss Letta Beth Williams, Jackson, Tenn., as flower girl and young Mark Varble, Chaffee, as ring bearer. Mrs. Edward Jackson served as her sister-in-law's matron of honor and Miss Joan Dyer, sorority sister from Newburn, Tenn., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Nick Harris, cousin of the groom, Miss Janet Bain and Miss Carol Blankenship, Jackson, Tenn., both sorority sisters of the bride.

The attendants were identically dressed in yellow floor-length sheath frocks of nylon blend crepe with tiny cap sleeves and modified empire waistlines. Headpieces of yellow flowers secured the three-tiered veils of tulle which completed their costumes. Each carried a white lace fan with white and yellow majestic daisies from which fell yellow and green streamers tied in lovers' knots.

BRIDEGROOM'S ATTENDANTS

Young chose as his best man the bride's brother, Edward Jackson, and groomsmen, Donald Harris and Tommy Dacus, Jackson, Tenn., both cousins of the groom. Melvern Wondell, Chaffee, and Ike Palmer, Jackson, fraternity brothers, also served as usher-groomsmen and lighted the candles. All men of the wedding party wore black formal attire and white boutonnieres.

Mrs. Jackson, mother of the bride, chose for her daughter's wedding a two piece steel blue lace dress with wrist-length sleeves and slim skirt. She completed her attire with white accessories. The groom's mother wore a pink lace suit with white accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white sweetheart roses.

RECEPTION

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the fellowship room of the church. The bride's table was covered with a white damask cloth and centered with a nine-branched candelabra entwined with daisies and greenery and holding tall glowing tapers. A crystal punch service graced one end of the table and the other held the four-columned wedding cake which was topped with the traditional bride and groom. Crystal compotes held nuts and mints. Those assisting with the serving were the Misses Janice and Brenda Jackson, cousins of the bride, Miss Elizabeth Wilkins and Mrs. Michael Patty, close friends of the bride. Miss Peggy Woods, sorority sister, presided at the guest book.

WEDDING TRIP

The bridal couple left immediately for a short wedding trip to an undisclosed destination and upon their return will be at home at 157 Lexington Avenue, Jackson, Tenn., where both are seniors at Union University. For traveling, the new Mrs. Young wore a two piece smoke blue cotton and dacron knit dress with white accessories and the orchid corsage from her bridal bouquet.

Among out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mrs. Paul Varble, Becky Varble, Mrs. Eugene Isaac and Leslie Rushing, all of Chaffee; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. E. Paul Jackson, Paul David Jackson, Rev. W. E. 'Trick Truck' Thrills Crowd

MALDEN -- Dick Belfatti's "Trick Truck" was about 600 feet short of completing his feat never before done at the Malden Drag Strip, of doing a wheel stand down the comple quarter- mile strip.

An attendance of around 500 persons were there to see the "Trick Truck" attempt a quarter - mile wheel stand. In his first run the truck went an eighth of a mile before coming down and on his second run he went even further and his last run was 600 feet short of the strip.

In the Competition Eliminator race, Freeman and Stanton D-G beat Gene McClanahan's A-FD Chevy.

The "Gunslinger C-mp 56 Chevy wiped out Mike Lassiter's 56 Chevy D-Gasser for the street eliminator crown and in the Little Eliminator race Tom Proffer's "Sharecropper" and Larry Mann tied for the crown after two protests.

The Batman - A - Go - Go car was defeated by the "White Mustang Ghost" and Mr. X, Sikeston, in his 66 Red Ford shut down Larry Warren's Ford, his E. T. was 18.22.

Slumping Cards Lose In 11th

Centerfielder Jim Wynn of the Astros, hitless in his last 12 appearances at the plate, launched a three - run homer in the 11th inning Sunday to boost Houston to a 6-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Meanwhile, in Cleveland Rocky Colavito and Leon Wagner found the mark for round-trippers in the sixth as the Indians scored seven runs and walloped the Kansas City A's, 14-3 after the A's won the first game of Sunday's double-header, 4-2.

St. Louis carried a 3-0 lead into the ninth inning before the Astros, shutout on five hits by Al Jackson, cracked the ice with three runs on hits by Chuck Harrison, Rusty Staub, Felix Mantilla, Sonny Jackson and a sacrifice fly by Wynn.

Then, in the 11th, Wynn tagged Joe Hoerner's second toss to put the Red Birds out of their misery.

The loss was charged to reliefer Tracy Stallard. Claude Raymond collected the victory in the three - hour contest.

By winning the opener, Kansas City took three-games out of the four - game series in Cleveland.

In the nightcap the Indians A's were deadlocked going into the sixth. Colavito's 14th homer -- his seventh in five days -- broke the tie and launched the Indians big inning.

Homers by Dick Green, Roger Repoz and Bert Campaneris accounted for the Kansas City runs in the first game.

St. Louis will meet the Giants in St. Louis tonight. Bob Gibson, 11-6, will pitch for the Cards' against San Francisco 'right-hander Ron Herbel, 2-0.

Kansas City is idle.

Kauai King Injured

BALTIMORE AP -- Injured Kauai King will be returned to Maryland and retirement. . . Mike Ford will return $280,000 to syndicate members who purchased shares in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner.

Those were the rapid-fire developments after a veterinarian examined Xrays of Kauai King's left front ankle Sunday and said he couldn't guarantee the 3-year-old colt would ever return to top form.

Kauai King, who finished fourth in the Belmont Stakes after winning the first two portions of the Triple Crown, pulled up lame last Saturday after a fifth-place finish in the Arlington Classic.

After being advised of Kauai King's long and possibly uncertain recovery period, Ford announced that the colt would be retired to stud at Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Sagamore Farm just outside Baltimore.

Ford, Kauai King's original sole owner, also reduced from $70,000 to $60,000 the value of each of the 36 shares in the syndicate which was organized after the Belmont.

Ford, who remained the largest stockholder in the syndicate by retaining title to eight shares, said he slashed the price "not as an inducement to stay in the syndicate, but as a show of good faith."

Each member of the syndicate, he told racing editor Bill Boniface of the Baltimore Sunpapers in a telephone interview, "will have the opportunity of getting out completely or taking the drop in price."

Jerold Hoffberger, who organized what will now be a $2,160,000 syndicate, said he had talked with as many syndicate members as he could reach, "and nobody has said he's not going to buy in."

Ford announced his decision after receiving a report from Dr. Raymond Murphy of Laurel, Md.

After examining wet X rays, Ford said, Murphy was "99 per cent sure no bones are fractured. However, he said the suspensories of the leg are pulled pretty bad and much worse than he originally believed."

"Murphy also believes that Kauai King would need from six to eight months in complete retirement to be repaired through blistering," Ford told Boniface, "and then it would take about 120 days more to get him back to the races and there would be the chance of his being beaten by an inferior horse.

"Rather than do that, I just made the decision to retire him."

Koufax Posts 14th Win

ATLANTA AP--Sandy Koufax became the winningest pitcher in the majors Sunday, racking up his fourteenth victory as the Los Angeles Dodgers edged Atlanta 2-1 on Willie Davis' run scoring double in the ninth inning.

Koufax scattered seven hits and struck out 11 in pushing past San Francisco's Juan Marichal, who failed in a bid for his 14th victory Saturday night. Koufax has lost twice.

The winning run was unearned. With one out Maury Wills went all the way to second when shortstop Denis Menke let his grounder get away from him. Clay Carroll then relieved starter Denny Lemaster and hit Wes Parker with a pitch. Davis followed with his double to left-center field.

The Braves tied the score 1-1 in the fifth when Dodger shortstop Maury Wills misplayed Hank Aaron's lazy pop fly and let it drop in for his third hit, allowing Lemaster to score from second.

The biggest crowd ever in Atlanta Stadium, 51,275, turned out for the game.

Lady Cunard was a hostess who had no use for even numbers at the table. "I ask people to luncheon," she once remarked, "to eat and to talk -- not to mate!"

Jim Ryun Takes Mile in 3:58.6

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK AP -- "We have a real good team -- a team that can beat the Russians -- but I hope no one gets over optimistic."

Stan Wright of Texas Southern, the first Negro coach to head a U. S. men's track and field team in major international competition, made the comment after the National AAU Outdoor Championships Saturday and Sunday at Downing Stadium.

The first two men in each event automatically made the team but others will be added to the squad today to strengthen it for the meets with Poland at Berkeley, Calif., July 16-17 and Russia at Los Angeles July 23-24.

Gerry Lindgren, the NCAA three-mile and six-mile champion, who was forced out of the weekend meet by acute bronchitis, and Tommie Smith, the injured sprint sensation from San Jose State, will be added to the squad.

Other distance runners also will be added so that Uncle Sam's team will be able to send in separate and fresh 5,000 -- and 10,000 -- meter running combinations against the Poles and Russians.

The emphasis will be on beating the Russians and avenging last year's stunning 118-112 point loss at Kiev, Russia. It was the first time in seven meetings the Soviet men had beaten the Yanks in a dual meet.

"The most important thing was getting a place on the team and a chance at the Russians," said 19-year-old Jim Ryun, the star of the meet with his 3.58.6 winning mile. "The meet with the Russians is the second most important meet. The Olympics comes first."

Ryun, who has just finished his freshman year at the University of Kansas, unreeled a spectacular 52.6 final quarter-mile after a slow 3:06 three-quarters, to provide New York with its first outdoor sub-four minute mile.

The 6-foot-2, 160-pound youngster spurted like a sprinter in the final 200 yards to whip veteran Olympian Dyrol Burleson by eight yards with Jim Grelle, another Olympian, slightly behind.

Burleson was timed in four minutes flat and Grele in 4:00.6.

"The pace was too slow," explained Ryun. "I took the lead because nobody wanted it. But there's too much emphasis on time. Winning this was the important thing because it earned me a place on the team that will meet the Russians."

Only three meet records were broken and three tied in the two-day championships but many of the races became tactical battles with the emphasis on finishing one-two instead of records.

The record breakers were Willie Davenport, Cleveland striders, 120-yard high hurdles, 13.3; Air Force Lt. Pat Traynor, 49er Track Club, Los Angeles, 3,000-meter - steeplechase, 8:40.6, and Art Walker, Southern California Striders, 53.8.

The record-tyers were Bob Seagren, S. C. Striders, pole vault, 17-0; Otis Burrell, 49er T. C., Los Angeles, 7-2, and Lee Evans, San Jose, Calif., 440 and 45.8 in the semifinals. Evans, 19, won the final in 45.9.

Ryun's victory was the second gold medal of the meet for Big Eight athletes, as Nebraska's Charlie Greene won the 100 Saturday in 9.4.

John Lawson of Kansas was fourth in the six-mile, and likely will make the U. S. team because both the 5,000 meters and 10,000 will be run against Russia. Conrad Nightingale of Kansas State was sixth in the 3,000 meter steeplechase in 9:03.6.

Peter Scott of Nebraska was fourth in the 880 at 1:48.8, with Oklahoma State's John Perry fifth and teammate Tom Von Ruden eighth.

Dave Crook of Nebraska was fifth in the 440 at 46.8 and Oklahoma's Ron Tull cleared 6-10 but was seventh on more misses en route.

Major League Stars

PITCHING -- Gaylord Perry, Giants, snapped Cincinnati's eight-game winning streak by hurling San Francisco to a two-hit, 10-0 victory while lifting his record to 10-1.

BATTING -- Boog Powell, Orioles, collected three hits and drove in four runs as Baltimore crushed California 12-7.

BOXING

SEOUL, Korea -- Kim Ki-Soo, 154 1/4, Korea, outpointed Nino Benvenuti, 153, Italy, 15. Kim Ki-Soo won world's junior middleweight boxing title.

OUTDOOR TIPS

LOON IS AMONG TOURISTS TO MISSOURI

JEFFERSON CITY -- Conservation Department employees here are being treated to the sight and the distinctive sound of a loon -- the feathered symbol of the great northern wilderness -- without leaving their desks.

The loon is a bird of the northern waters, but one specimen apparently decided to spend his summer in Missouri -- a decision being reached by increasing numbers of out-of-state tourists.

There are five ponds on the grounds of the new Conservation Department headquarters here and, while they are not northern, they are waters that are satisfactory to at least this loon. He appeared in early June and shows no inclination to leave. Loons are not uncommon in Missouri in the spring and fall, but in the summer they are rare.

The loon joins a parade of migratory wildlife that has found the ponds and grounds at the headquarters inviting. But although several species of ducks have stopped over, the loon is the first migratory bird to prefer the ponds to his northern breeding grounds.

DEER SEASON WILL BE NOVEMBER 12-18

JEFFERSON CITY -- Missouri's 1966 firearms deer season will be November 12 through 18, with a return to any-deer hunting in most counties north of the Missouri River.

The archery deer season will be the same as last year's -- October 1 through December 15 with deer of either sex legal statewide.

This will be the third any-deer season in most of the northern Missouri counties in five years, with bucks-only hunting permitted prior to 1962 and in 1963 and 1965.

Biologists feel the herd in those highly agricultural counties could grow too fast with annual bucks-only hunting. On the other hand, they said, annual any-deer seasons could produce an overharvest.

Five additional counties near St. Louis will be returned to bucks-only hunting making a total of eight in this area given that status. The purpose of the move is to reduce the harvest near the metropolitan area. Franklin, Jefferson and St. Louis counties were made bucks-only last year and will continue with that restriction this season. The five new counties in the St. Louis area in which only bucks will be legal game are Crawford, Gasconade, Phelps, Warren and Washington.

In a departure from regulations of recent years, the Conservation Commission will require checking of deer taken in those eight St. Louis area counties as well as in all any-deer counties. As in the past, checking will not be required in the other 20 bucks-only counties.

Other counties where bucks only will be legal are Barton, Bates, Cape Girardeau, Cass, Dade, Dunklin, Greene, Henry, Jackson, Jasper, Lafayette, Lawrence, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Pettis, Polk, Saline, Scott, and Vernon.

The new regulations carries only one change in hunting method: this season, deer may not be hunted from a boat with a motor attached. Otherwise, the permitted methods are the same as those last year.

Vaccine for Mumps Passes Early Tests

CHICAGO AP -- A new vaccine against mumps appears nearly 100 per cent effective, a scientist reported today -- and his own 8-year-old daughter had a hand in developing it.

She supplied the strain of virus that is "tamed" or attenuated to produce the live-virus vaccine.

The scientist is Dr. Maurice R. Hilleman of the Merck Institute for Therapeutic Research, West Point, Pa. The virus is called the Jeryl Lynn strain, after his daughter who came down with mumps three years ago.

In one test involving school-age and younger children, the vaccine was 98 per cent effective in preventing mumps among children exposed to natural virus infection, Dr. Hilleman told the American Therapeutics Society.

Vaccinated youngsters have shown protective antibodies for as long as seven months, he said, raising hopes that one vaccination may confer life long immunity.

The new vaccine is not yet available for general use. It must undergo broader testing before it can be considered for government license.

Mumps, generally a mild disease, sometimes leads to serious complications, especially in adults.

Dr. Hilleman developed the new vaccine with Dr. Eugene Buynak of Merck. Clinical tests were carried out with Drs. Robert E. Weible and Joseph Stokes Jr., of the University of Pennsylvania, Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and Lankenau Hospital.

In one study near Philadelphia, 402 children were vaccinated between October 1965 and last January, with another 407 studied but not vaccinated. Ninety-eight per cent of vaccinated youngsters developed antibodies, compared with none among the unvaccinated.

The vaccine did not produce any undesirable symptoms of the natural disease, Dr. Hilleman said.

This spring, when mumps spread naturally through the community, 61 per cent of 100 unvaccinated children known to have been exposed to mumps came down with the disease. Only two of 100 vaccinated children got mumps.

The researchers had sought for several years for a strain of mumps virus that could be altered enough so as not to cause the disease, but yet be capable of inducing immunity. The Jeryl Lynn strain met these requirements, they say.

Mention of Castro Missing From Cuban Radio

By THEODORE A. EDIGER

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mention of Fidel Castro has been strangely missing lately in broadcasts over the government-controlled radio in Cuba.

Miami monitors of Havana Cuban prime minister mentioned throughout this week They recalled only sparse mention of him since he was reported inspecting Hurricane Alma's damage June 8.

That contrasts sharply with former daily mention of Castro in newscasts and other reports.

It also coincides with widespread speculation as to Castro's status. Robert McCloskey, U.S. State Department press officer, fanned the conjectures by commenting on Castro's "uncharacteristic silence."

But exiles, often gullible to the numerous rumors about things happening to their enemy No. 1, are mostly wary of this one. They point out that Castro has played hard to find before.

One of the prime minister's most vociferous critics, his sister Juanita, who lives here in self-imposed exile, has remained silent on speculation as to his whereabouts.

Castro, who likes to make speeches, made his last broadcast address on May 1. He called President Johnson "one of the greatest criminals in history." He told his people that Cuba's vital sugar crop would be small.

On June 4, Castro was reported seen on television among officials attending a function at which President Osvaldo Dorticos spoke.

The Citizens Committee for a Free Cuba, a Miami-based group comprised of Americans, said it had reports from good sources that Castro has been undergoing electric - shock medical treatments. It said the reports, from diplomatic quarters and from the Cuban underground, added that a double has been making appearances for Castro.

Dale Quits After College Site Dispute

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Stanley I. Dale, vice president of the trustees of Missouri Western Junior College and a former mayor of St. Joseph, resigned from the board Thursday night in a dispute over the location of a new campus for the school.

Dale was a leader in the campaign which secured approval of a $6-million bond issue for the college in a special election on May 10. He said all the campaign literature indicated it would be located on a tract across Frederick Avenue from the St. Joseph State Hospital and to shift now would be to break faith with the voters.

The trustees voted 5-1 Thursday at a special meeting to reconsider and perhaps choose another location. Dale cast the only dissent.

The Missouri Legislature has agreed to provide sufficient support to convert the college into a four-year school once the new physical facilities are ready.

The trustees voted earlier this year to locate them on the 130-acre tract across from the hospital. It once was part of the hospital grounds, and the Legislature a year ago authorized its sale to the junior college district.

Dr. Thompson E. Potter, president of the trustees, called the special board meeting after State Sen. John E. Downs of St. Joseph issued a statement Monday saying the Frederick Avenue site is too small to allow for growth of the college.

Dale was mayor of St. Joseph from 1950 to 1958. He is a lawyer.

Child Welfare Committee Has Picnic June 20

A picnic given by the Child Welfare Advisory Committee of Scott County was held at Clayton Park on Monday evening, June 20, with approximately 60 persons in attendance.

Guests for the outing were the foster parents and children in the care of Scott County Child Welfare. Other guests included Paul Nelson, Child Welfare Supervisor, and Mrs. Nelson; Charles Simpson, Chairman of Scott County Public Assistance Commission; K. M. Streeter, Commissioner, and Mrs. Streeter; M. E. Gisi, Commissioner; Mrs. Cathleen Gipson, Director of Scott County Welfare, and Gipson; Mrs. Margery Street, Casework Supervisor; Miss Claire Street, Student Trainee; Mrs. Roberta Hubbs, Caseworker; Richard Gemeinhardt, Caseworker, and Mrs. Gemeinhardt; Harris Rodgers, Presiding Judge of Scott County Court, and Mrs. Rodgers; J. E. Childress and Melvin Glueck, Judges of Scott County Court; and Barney George, special investigator.

The Child Welfare Program of Scott County does much in providing for the needs of the children in the area. The child Welfare Advisory Committee is one of the 32 committees in the Missouri. It was organized and the members appointed in January, 1966. Its function is to have particular knowledge of the state plans of service given through the County Welfare Office and to help obtain necessary finances for the needy children.

The members of the committee are: Jim Mac Emerson, chairman, Morley; Mrs. Gwen McDonough, Child Welfare Worker, Morley, Harvey Hubbs, secretary, Sikeston; the Rev. Willard Spencer, Sikeston; Mrs. M. L. Limbaugh, Sikeston; Mrs. W. G. Mason, Oran; Mrs. Melvin Glueck, Illmo; Mrs. Bill Miller, Benton; and Les Lankford, Chaffee.

He said if all young men are given mental and physical examinations when they turn 18 the uncertainties of the draft will be dispelled for many and the country will have a better idea of the physical and mental well-being of its youth.

And if the length of service under draft was lengthened and the length of service shortened for volunteers it could be that voluntary enlistments would be greatly increased.

Mrs. Fred Denton from Wilson, Ark., was an out-of-town guest.

Individual Freedom And The Common Defence

by Walter Millis

FREEDOM AND SEDITION

Such, in brief, were the defenses against sedition and subversion which by 1954 had been erected in the United States. Were they compatible with the requirements of freedom and justice under contemporary world conditions? In attempting an answer one faces not one but two basic issues. The first is general and theoretical: Can a free society enforce such a proscription of a belief, as such, without peril to its freedom? Let it be assumed that the whole system for the suppression of Communists and Communism operates accurately, that all caught in its toils really are Communists at heart, loyal to the faith and to the domestic and international organizations which embody it, as, indeed, a great many unquestionably are. Is such a proscription of belief allowable? Thomas Jefferson, when he drafted the Virginia Statute of Religious Freedom, thought not:

To suffer the civil magistrate to intrude his powers into the field of opinion, and to restrain the possession or propagation of principles on supposition of their ill tendency, is a dangerous fallacy. . . Truth is great and will prevail if left to herself. . . errors ceasing to be dangerous when it is permitted freely to contradict them.

Those who today take the contrary view usually do so on the ground that it is not error which they wish to combat but the conspiracies which it engenders, as Sidney Hook put it in a catchy title: "Heresy, Yes-Conspiracy, No." Yet virtually all heresies -- from the time, if one likes of the early Christian martyrs -- assume some conspiratorial characteristics, and virtually all efforts to suppress heresy have been justified on the ground that it is the conspiracy, not the error, which is the object of the repression. Jesuit missionaries in the England of the Tudors and the Stuarts were hounded primarily as secret agents of a foreign power rather than on the ground that their teachings were erroneous. Sometimes the conspiracies are quite real -- no one can deny that the Catholic plotters under Guy Fawkes introduced actual barrels of gunpowder into the cellar of the House of Commons and came near to destroying the Protestant King and Commons together. Sometimes they are fictions of overheated imagination, like Titus Oates' fantastic allegations, or like the conspiracies to commit murder and child sacrifice described in the celebrated anti-Semitic forgery, "The Protocols of Zion." Sometimes, as seems to have been the case with the heretical "deviations" so savagely suppressed by Stalin in the '30's, real elements of dangerous conspiracy are mingled with the febrile and fearsome inventions of the tyrants and their secret police. The Hook principle, "Conspiracy, No," since it has been invoked in nearly every heresy hunt in history, is of little use in answering the theoretical question.

K.C. Woman Offered Conditional Parole

KANSAS CITY, Kan. AP -- A 22-year-old mother convicted of first-degree manslaughter in the torture death of her 16-day-old son was offered a parole Friday if she would submit to sterilization and psychiatric treatment.

Judge O. Q. Claflin III presented the alternative to Mrs. Cassandra Roy and said she otherwise faced a 5 to 21 year sentence. Mrs. Roy told her attorney she had no objection to the conditions.

Judge Claflin sent Mrs. Roy to the Kansas Industrial Reformatory for Women, where she will be examined by medical personnel from the diagnostic center in Topeka.

Editor to Fight Extradition

JACKSON -- Application for a writ of habeas corpus to prevent the extradition of Jackson newspaper editor Richard R. Canaday to California will be filed in Circuit Court at Jackson, Sen. Albert M. Spradling Jr., his attorney said Friday.

Gov. Warren Hearnes Friday signed extradition papers which would send Mr. Canaday back to California to face two state charges of forgery.

Sen. Spradling said the editor will go before Magistrate Court at Jackson upon receipt of the extradition warrant. There bond will be set and the magistrate, under Missouri law, will allow reasonable time for filing of the suit in Circuit Court.

Mr. Canaday was arrested at Jackson April 5 on a federal warrant charging unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in connection with the charges. The charges were dismissed by the government about two weeks ago along with $2,500 bond which had been filed with federal authoritories.

Mr. Canaday, now editor of the Jackson Post and Cashbook, was at the time of the alleged crimes a commission salesman of advertising for the House Lover's Magazine of El Cerrito, Calif.

The California information charges he collected $63 in commissions for advertising by two ranchers and he forged the ranchers' names.

Eugene G. Buschmann, Missouri administrative hearing commissioner who heard the extradition case, said California law was broad enough to cover what Canaday allegedly did.

Sen. Spradling argued at the hearing May 17 that the papers on which California was relying were not advertising contracts but simply were space reservations.

People Bring New Ideas To Washington Party Scene

By KELLY SMITH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The waiter placed the hunk of beef in the middle of the low coffee-style table. The guest panicked. No forks, no knives, not even a spoon.

The old hands dug in, a la Arabic.

The music started. Longhairs strummed their steel guitars and the chandeliers shook. The guest looked around: two pairs of pajamas on the dance floor.

In Washington nowadays, one doesn't have to attend night after night of similar banquet hall dinners served in the old formal ways. There are new people on the scene who do things differently.

At the Moroccan Embassy, you dine in the king's beach tent.

Ambassador Dr. Ahmed Laraki and his pretty wife, Badia, gave a swinging party for 100 in honor of Ali and Jackie Bengeloun, their predecessors on embassy row.

Cocktails were served indoors, in the striped Moroccan room. Then, mushing over a lawn still damp from rain, guests tiptoed outside to a white canvas marquee, said to be the king's weekend beach retreat.

It's ornate, brocaded gold, red and green interior blended into an Arabian Nights atmosphere: low leather cushions around low brass tables, carpets on the lawn, whole roast lambs, wine, burning incense and conversation in French, English and Arabic.

A belly dancer, imported from a local night club, entertained during dessert.

Inside, the Hangmen, a long-haired combo specializing in gyrations, warmed up.

Barbara Howard, blonde socialite friend of Luci Baines Johnson, wore pajamas. So did Yolande B. Fox, the former Miss America from Alabama.

The retiring ambassador of Amuritania, Ahmed-Bab Miske, is an expressive friendly poet.

Miske and his delicate, French-born wife gave a goodby party in their backyard, Bedouin-style.

Kidney and liver were served hot on long skewers. African music wafted through two authentic striped tents from the Sahara, and guests relaxed sheik-like on low cushions or reclined on Arabian carpets.

"You eat," said the ambassador, "like this." And he pulled apart meat with his fingers, tossing it into his mouth like popcorn.

African and Middle Eastern diplomats may have started a rage of eating with fingers and sitting on the ground — but the Orientals are evening the score.

Chopsticks are being served more and more at dinners, as well as the usual utensils. Several private dinners among Japanese diplomats have included the low tables and cushions.

State Water Pollution Board Slates Regulation Hearings

By GEORGE SITTERLEY
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY (A) — The Missouri Water Pollution Board announced Thursday it will hold a series of hearings over the state to determine what water quality regulations should be established on interstate streams.

The standards of water quality will be set up to protect the public health, enhance the quality of the water for public water supplies, fish and wildlife, recreation, agriculture, industry and other legitimate uses, the board said.

The board's engineers have met with water pollution engineers of Iowa, Kansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Oklahoma in an effort to develop basic regulations.

The hearings will be held in circuit court rooms and anyone interested in water quality conditions is urged to attend.

The resultant water quality regulations will be submitted to interior secretary Stewart L. Udall, for final approval.

Dates and locations of hearings include:

Pineville, July 13—Elk River, Buffalo and Lost Creeks.

Forsyth, July 14-White, north fork of the White and Spring Rivers.

Doniphan, July 15 — Black, Current and Eleven Point rivers.

Carthage, Aug. 4—Spring River and Center, Turkey and Shoal creeks.

Nevada, Sept. 15—Osage, Little Osage, Marmaton and Marais des Cygnes rivers.

Kansas City, Sept. 16 — Blue River and Indian Creek.

Maryville, Oct. 13—Missouri River above Kansas City, Nishnabotna, Tarkio, Platte, 102 and Nodaway rivers.

Trenton, Oct. 14 — Grand, Thompson and Chariton rivers.

Memphis, Nov. 17 — Fabius, Fox, Wyaconda, Des Moines and the Mississippi River above St. Louis.

St. Louis, Nov. 18 -- Mississippi River from St. Louis to Cape Girardeau reach.

Kennett, Dec. 9—Mississippi River below Cape Girardeau; St. Francis River and Little River ditches.

Jefferson City, Jan. 20, 1967 —Missouri River below Kansas City.

The board reported good progress is being made in cleaning up Missouri streams, industry generally has been cooperative and cities are forging ahead in sewage treatment plants.

Kansas City will complete construction of its waste treatment plants by Dec. 31. Metropolitan St. Louis sewer district has completed its Missouri River plant and its Mississippi River plants will be completed by the end of 1967.

The board said industrial waste problems on Center Creek in Jasper County should be completed within two years. Progress also is being made in eliminating the pollution caused by abandoned strip mines.

Monitoring of stream quality on the Meramec, Castor, Black and St. Francis River watersheds has been intensified because of the boom in mining activity in those areas.

All industries on the Missouri and Mississippi rivers in Missouri now have satisfactory waste treatment facilities, the board said.

In an experiment, albatrosses were taken from their nesting place at Midway Island and released at distant places in the north Pacific. In returning to its nest, one bird covered 3,200 miles in just over 10 days.

Plucky Army Medic His Own Patient

By BOB POOS

NHA TRANG, Viet Nam (AP) — Army medic Tommy Cole aided many wounded men during his 10 months in Viet Nam with the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division. The last one he worked on was himself.

Cole's face, with a field dressing plastered across much of it, became familiar to millions of Americans last January through a series of pictures taken by Associated Press photographer Henri Huet. They were used on the front pages of many American newspapers and one became the cover of Life Magazine.

The 21-year-old medic from Pittsburg, Kan., tended numerous wounded men during the battle of An Thai last Jan. 28 and 29 in spite of the fact that he suffered a bullet crease on his left cheek.

Thursday, Cole's luck ran out after he had taken part in every major battle the 1st Cavalry has had since arriving in Viet Nam. He was severely wounded while on operation near the hamlet of Dong Tre, 255 miles north of Saigon.

"We were approaching the creek bed," Cole said today at the 8th Field Hospital here in Nha Trang, "and fighting broke out. A couple of guys were hit and one of them, a sergeant, was thrashing around on the ground and screaming for a medic.

"I started running down to help him and I felt something hit me and spin me around and the next thing I knew my face was hitting the gravel."

One bullet had shattered his left arm above the elbow and another tore a large hunk of flesh from his left thigh.

"My left arm was bleeding pretty bad," Cole said, "and one of the guys put a tourniquet on it."

Hiding behind some rocks, Cole further adjusted the tourniquet and kept it tight.

"If it hadn't been for Roy there, I never would have gotten out of that place and neither would have several other guys," Cole said.

He referred to Spec. 4 Roy V. Taylor Jr., 22, of Kirbyville, Tex.

Taylor, himself hit in one arm, dragged Cole and some other wounded men away from the bullet swept creek bed.

Cole, also a Spec. 4, had extended his enlistment to stay with his buddies in the 2nd battalion of the 7th Cavalry.

"My mother got kind of put out with me for doing it," he said, "but I didn't want to leave the rest of the guys here."

He volunteered to go on this last operation in spite of the fact that he had less than two weeks to serve in Viet Nam and could have remained back at the base camp in An Khe.

The platoon Cole was with was ambushed by two or more snipers armed with automatic weapons. They killed several Americans and wounded more.

The young medic saw action for the first time last November during the bloody fighting in the Ia Drang valley. He tended many wounded during the battle but was not wounded himself.

He wasn't quite as lucky at An Thai when the bullet creased his face but he had only a short stay in the hospital. He was credited with saving several lives in spite of the handicap of his wound and a bandage that half blinded him.

Cole remarked: "I feel like I belong with these guys. I feel like I'm really doing something here. I don't really get into the fighting you know. I'm only a medic. Maybe I'll ask to be a rifleman some day."

Sunday, Cole goes home. He and a score of other seriously wounded will fly first to a hospital at Clark Air Base in the Philippines and then on to the United States.

Some like Cole have been in the heat, mud, filth and terror of infantry fighting in Viet Nam for almost a year.

Why Bob Watson and Megan O'Brien missed each other:

They're both defensive drivers. And they know the only way to beat the law of centrifugal force is to slow down before entering a curve. So they do. It's a defensive driving technique that can save you from a head-on collision. Are you a defensive driver?

ALLENTOWN ANTICS—Attracting attention was easy, but whether these models can sell incredulous bystanders on these jet-set fashions is another question. The designs, created by Princess Galitzine of Rome on special order, were paraded in Allentown, Pa., by a department store. The quilted-nylon, turtle-neck jumpsuit complete with space helmet, left, is for resort and beach wear. The swimsuit with peephole helmet, at right, is of orange and white stretch fabric.

School for Disturbed Sends Most Graduates to College

By DAVID NYHAN

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — A school for pupils from a hospital for the emotionally disturbed is sending more than half its graduates on to college, where they hope to match the records of last year's seniors.

It is the Arlington School, on the grounds of McLean Hospital, a division of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Dr. Francis de Marneffe called the school "one of the most successful ventures ever undertaken by the hospital" in his commencement address Thursday.

He is director of the hospital, where the experiment in the education of the emotionally disturbed started five years ago. Since then, 25 of the 75 graduates have gone to college.

All eleven seniors graduated Thursday, and seven of them look forward to college careers. Of the same number who went on last year, six of them posted averages of "C" or better.

Headmaster John F. Dunn believes the school is the only one of its type in the country — a college preparatory course with regular teachers and structured classes, operating in a hospital.

Dunn said he has agreed not to disclose the names of the colleges which have accepted the students.

The emphasis is on education, in an island of normalcy, Dunn says, "and while we are happy if therapy occurs, our emphasis is on learning."

Housed in the ten-room home of a wealthy former patient, the school got started with $20,000 in hospital funds and a matching grant from the Ford Foundation.

There are six full-time teachers, average age 26, who are "doers, Peace Corps types," Dunn said.

"They are not trained in therapy, and do not manipulate the students, but concentrate on teaching."

There are 35 regular students and 10 who are tutored.

Recent Bride Is Honored With Shower

Miss Suzanne Gilmore, who became the bride of Jim Green of Ferguson June 11, was honored with a bridal shower May 30 at the home of Mrs. Jim Moore, 912 North Kingshighway. Mrs. Tony Heckemeyer was co-hostess.

Flowers were used in decorating throughout the house. The refreshment table was decorated with blue and white flowers in a three tiered arranger and silver compotes held nuts and mints. Punch and coffee were served from silver servers. A five branched candelabra also graced the table.

A large wedding bell was the central decoration on the gift table.

There were 54 invited guests.

Bible School Has Commencement

MOREHOUSE -Commencement exercises of the Vacation Bible School of the First Baptist church were held Sunday, June 19. Miss Karen Clark led the service and Mrs. Jeanne Rahm played the piano.

The school has set a record for the past three years with an enrollment of 123 and an average attendance of 93.

The congregation gave the pledges to the American flag, the Christian flag and the Holy Bible. Each pledge was followed by a song learned during the school by the pupils.

The beginners, led by Mrs. Mabel Northcutt and Miss Sandra Carmack, gave a program on short Bible verses and children's songs.

The primaries followed, led by Mrs. Niva Breeden and Miss Barbara Orr, with special music and Bible verses.

Miss Clark, along with several workers, led the juniors in Bible questions, memory verses and special music.

The intermediate department gave a special presentation. The drama was centered around the Apostle Peter's release from prison as recorded in the 12th chapter of Acts. Mrs. Joanne Harris and Mrs. Jo Ann Bohannon were the leaders.

Following the program, certificates were given to all the pupils present by Mrs. Georgia Henning who served as principal.

Some very unusual handwork was displayed in the dining hall to about 150.

Moby Dick Never Had It This Good

By DALE NELSON

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — When Edward I. Griffin talked to a high school class studying Herman Melville's "Moby Dick," he summed up his lecture, and a lot more, in eight words:

"Ahab had his whale, and I have mine."

A year has passed since Ted Griffin's whale swam into a salmon net near the cannery town from which he whale would take his name— Namu, B.C.

In that year, Namu has become the main attraction of Griffin's Seattle Public Aquarium, starred in a movie, been the focus of a civic controversy, undergone an electrocardiogram, put on weight, and made money for Griffin.

Namu is a killer whale. Griffin bought him for $8,000 from his fisherman captors and had him towed here in a pen.

At the aquarium on Elliott Bay, Namu puts on five shows a day, alternating with a trained seal act. His biggest crowd-pleaser is a turn in which he leaps from the water for a salmon which Griffin dangles from a tower. The whale's owner, wearing a plastic suit, also goes bareback riding on his whale.

Namu spent the winter behind a submarine net in Rich Cove, across Puget Sound, where scenes were shot for the movie, "Namu the Killer Whale."

How do you measure a whale's heartbeat? Dr. Merrill P. Spencer of Seattle's Virginia Mason Foundation for Medical Education and Research did it with a plumber's friend. A suction cup, equipped with sensors connected to a recorder, was stuck on Namu's chest.

Griffin figures Namu is about 8 or 10 years old. The whale is 25 feet long, three feet longer than when captured. Its weight was estimated at four tons a year ago. To arrive at the weight of a whale, you measure the girth at strategic points and then calculate the water displacement. When Namu got up to six tons a few months ago, its diet was cut from 400 pounds of salmon a day to 325 pounds.

Killer whales enter Puget Sound when the salmon are running, and anyone seeing one is asked to telephone the aquarium collect. Griffin wants a mate for Namu.

Bill of Rights Additions

ASPEN, Colo. AP -- The Bill of Rights will in time be broadened to include the right to health and the right to be different, says Dr. Richard Farson, director of the Western Behavioral Sciences Institute, La Jolla, Calif.

Farson told the International Design Conference that other constitutional rights will include the right to intimacy, sexual fulfillment, travel, study, altruism and leisure.

New Jersey Tea

During the Revolutionary War, leaves of a native buckthorn shrub which grows along the East Coast all the way to Florida and as far west as Texas were used to make tea. Today the plant is called New Jersey tea.

New Policy Asks West Germans To Be Friendly

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN, Germany AP -- Instructions have gone out to many West German officials to quit being standoffish with their counterparts from East Germany.

West Germany does not officially recognize the existence of the East German Communist state but the facts of life require many kinds of contacts. There are dozens of informal agreements covering everything from alloy steel shipments to zip code numbers, and including what to do about young men who leave illegitimate babies in the East and make off to the West.

West German officials have been under orders to keep strictly to business when dealing with their opposite numbers and not to get into political discussions.

The new instructions, approved by Chancellor Ludwig Erhard and his Cabinet, point out that the Communists have instructions to talk about politics. West Germans need dodge the subject no longer.

"It is expected," they were told, "that in such discussions you will objectively and firmly represent the free system laid down in the constitutions of the Federal Republic and its member states."

The West Germans are advised to argue emphatically that Germans have not reconciled themselves to the division of the country or to Communist rule in the East.

The new instructions are part of Erhard's policy of seeking contracts of all kinds with the 17 million Germans under Communist rule.

Full-scale reunification of the country looks no closer than it has since World War II.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Your remarks and the column you printed by Will Jones of Minneapolis was the most effective bit of writing against cigaret smoking I have ever read. It beats the Surgeon General's report to pieces.

I am a woman who has smoked at least two packs a day for over 18 years. When I was a teen-ager I sneaked cigarets behind my parents backs. I was never without gum or mints in my mouth when I arrived home from school. When my mother found a pack of cigarets in my purse I said I was carrying them for a friend.

My husband has asked me to quit smoking but I insisted it was a symbol of my independence and I would not allow him to dominate me. My children have begged me to quit because they heard cigarets can make people sick.

The day I read the description of how cigaret smokers look to non-smokers I threw my cigarets in the garbage can and swore off for life. I'm sure I shall never smoke another as long as I live. Thanks a million. -- FREE AT LAST

Dear Free: Thank you, but not all readers share your enthusiasm for my comments. Please read on:

Ann Landers: I am not calling you "dear" because you are an idiot and a troublemaker. Why don't you go out and play in the traffic?

That column on cigaret smoking was an insult to millions of Americans. I, for one, demand an apology.

I am an attractive, well-groomed, well-mannered woman of 45. My friends consider me immaculate. I am neither ill-bred, ill-mannered, nor inconsiderate. My clothes do not stink and I resent being told that I stink up the world around me.

Men and women have been smoking for centuries and they are going to continue to smoke in spite of Ann Landers and that screwball in Minneapolis, the Surgeon General, the family doctor and the handful of nuts who are trying to make it illegal. Why? Because smoking is a source of relaxation and in this hectic world people need it to survive. -- NICOTINE ADDICT WHO ENJOYS EVERY PUFF

Dear Addict: I hope you are one who WILL survive. Some haven't -- and the list is getting longer all the time.

Good luck to you -- and the longer you smoke, the more you'll need it.

Dear Ann: Will Jones is right. It IS a smoker's world. And it's going to continue to be a smoker's world. So why doesn't he get out of it? --SOUTH BENDER

Dear Ann: Your and that gink in Minneapolis are both nuts. Can you imagine phoning friends to invite them to a party in your home and asking them if they smoke? And if they say "Yes" --telling them to stay home? It's insane.-- MADISON MRS.

Dear Ann: Why don't you and Jones go live in Russia? You'd make great dictators. -- NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT

Dear Ann Landers: I resent the remarks by that loon in Minneapolis. So he hates women smokers, does he? He sounds like a maniac who must be on something stronger than cigarets.

We must all overlook faults in other people. If Will Jones so despises women smokers that he would tear a cigaret from a woman's mouth then why does he take her out? I'd like to hear his answer to this question. -- PEACE PIPE

Dear Pipe: So would I. How about it, Will, baby? If you'll write it, I'll print it.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting -- And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 25¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

Committ your work to the Lord, and your plans will be established. (Proverbs 16:3, RSV)

Although religion is the oldest continuing story in the history of mankind, it's still one of the biggest. Especially today. Sweeping changes are taking place in every region of the religious world, and they affect almost every member of our community.

To keep track of all these developments is a big job for an expert reporter, and fortunately, we have just the man for the job: George Cornell, religion writer for The Associated Press and author of the weekly column, "Religion Today."

In his 15 years of covering religion, Cornell has won the reputation of being among the most knowledgeable writers on the scene. He's also won almost every important award, including a James O. Supple Memorial Award given to the outstanding religion writer of the year by all the other writers in the field.

As a member of The Associated Press, we count on George Cornell to get us the whole story. As a reader of this newspaper, you can count on us to get it to you—fully, factually, and above all, fairly.

Helen Keller Observes Special Day Today

EASTON, Conn. (AP)—Today was a special day in the life of Helen Keller, a woman whose life has been filled with special days.

It was 86 years ago today that she was born in Tuscumbia, Ala. Nineteen months after she was born she was struck deaf and blind.

The story of her triumph over these infirmities has been an inspiration to those similarly afflicted, as well as those who have read her many books or seen the movies or plays based on her life.

After spending most of her life working tirelessly to better the conditions of the blind and deaf, Miss Keller retired to a rural retreat in western Connecticut.

Her immediate family and a small group of intimate friends helped Miss Keller celebrate her birthday at Arcan Ridge, her country home.

Seeing-Eye Dog Found to Be Almost as Blind as Master

DETROIT AP -- Hesitancy at the end of the leash told Jack McAdams, 23, something was wrong.

It turned out, the blind was leading the blind.

McAdams' dog, Dell, was guiding him through downtown Detroit streets on a rainy April day when he sensed indecision on the dog's part.

A veterinarian discovered that Dell, a 7-year-old Doberman Pinscher, was as blind as her master and had been leading him "on instinct and guts alone."

Dell had cataracts, a malady common to both humans and dogs. The lenses of her eyes were so fogged she barely could distinguish light from darkness.

Fortunately dogs have a second set of lenses, though an operation to remove the defective set costs $350. And no one could promise McAdams what the results of the operation would be.

McAdams had trained Dell since she was a puppy. He felt he just couldn't let her down.

A short - wave radio operator, McAdams told other hams about his and Dell's plight. The operation money rolled in and there was transportation to take Dell to a clinic.

Two weeks ago Dr. William Magrane of Mishawaka, Ind., removed Dell's clouded lenses. Thursday the stitches inside her eyelids were removed.

Dell had trouble shaking off effects of the anesthetic, because she is a canine diabetic. It was discovered three years ago the dog was a diabetic, but she takes her insulin quite obligingly.

"I shout, 'Here Dell, time for your shot,' and she comes trotting up," McAdams said. "My mother gives her the needle. We have never had any trouble."

But after the eye operation, "she lay there for hours, like she was dead," said Onelte Robinson, McAdams' mother and a nurse at Doctors Hospital, who made Dell her special patient through the dog's ordeal.

Mrs. Robinson says Dell is starting to look better. "Her coat is coming back and she is beginning to scamper around the house again."

McAdams knows Dell can see again, even without a veterinarian's assurance. He can feel a more confident tug on the leash.

"Right after the vet took out her stitches, she placed her paw in my hand for a handshake. She must be able to see again. She put her paw in the right place."

Young Mother Badly Injured in Plane Crash Keeps Baby Safe

SEATTLE, Wash. AP - "Her courage and initiative saved our baby's life," says the husband of a young mother who managed to keep her 2-month-old baby and herself alive for two days in a plane wreckage on a cold, snowy mountain.

Loren Little, 24-year-old University of Washington medical student, spoke with pride as he told of the ordeal his wife, Karla, 25, underwent to save herself and their daughter, Laurie.

Mrs. Little's father and stepmother died in the crash on the snow-covered side of 9,671-foot Mt. St. Helens.

Mrs. Little suffered a broken back, broken ribs, a collapsed lung and frostbitten feet. Doctors reported she was resting comfortably in a hospital today. Her daughter has only a bruised forehead.

Little said his wife, who was rescued Saturday, recalled the ordeal clearly.

It began when Mrs. Little and her daughter were picked up in a rented plane by her father, Grant Erickson, 49, an executive of a radio supply company in Sioux Falls, S.D., and his wife.

They planned to fly to Norwalk, Calif., for the golden wedding anniversary of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Little.

"I was supposed to go with them," Little said. "At the last minute I changed my mind."

Flying south toward Portland, Ore., Thursday the four ran into heavy weather. Mrs. Little thinks a wingtip struck the rocky side of the mountain.

Erickson crash-landed the craft on a ledge at the 5,500-foot level. He and his wife were killed.

Little, describing his father-in-law as a "very cautious pilot, a sensible flier," noted that the last reports from the plane had its altitude as 8,500 feet. He believes Erickson fought to bring the crippled craft to its crash landing at a much lower altitude, "probably saving the life of my wife and child."

The young husband flew with the search planes, refusing to abandon hope through a long Friday and into Saturday afternoon.

Inside the broken plane, Little's wife, paralyzed below the waist, cuddled and nursed her baby.

Vainly through the long hours she tried to reach a bag containing supplemental food. She did manage to reach two baby blankets, wrap Laurie in one and stuff the other in a broken window to keep out windblown snow.

Rocks kept falling from above, bouncing and clattering on the wreckage.

Thursday she could hear the search planes. Friday she saw them but had no way or strength to signal. Finally, Saturday afternoon, a helicopter spotted the broken plane.

She asked the first rescuer, a paramedic, to "get the food and feed the baby."

Mother and infant were evacuated by helicopter to a hospital in Longview, Wash. There Little was reunited with his daughter and his wife, who was groggy from pain and exhaustion and had forgotten Loren had not been aboard the plane.

"She opened her eyes and looked at me for about 15 seconds," said Little. "Then she said, 'I thought you were dead.' "

Stroup Warns About Seed Peddlers

By TOM B. STROUP

It has been called to our attention that seed peddlers have been operating in the area.

Out of area seed salesmen sometimes come into an area to sell "so called unavailable" varieties that are superior to local grown varieties.

One seed salesman has been selling farmers a contract for Statler wheat seed for September delivery. He is asking for a $1 per bushel deposit with the remaining $4.95 per bushel due on delivery of the wheat.

Statler wheat is being grown in the area for certification and will be available this year locally. The price will be considerably under the $5.95 quoted by the "out-of-the area salesman."

Cape Gets Grant For Airport

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Federal Aviation Agency has approved a grant of $891,000 for improvements at Cape Girardeau's Municipal Airport which will allow construction of a 6500-foot runway.

The sum will match $880,000 in municipal bonds for airport improvements approved by voters several months ago.

The sum is $49,000 less than the city had originally asked, but more than had originally been granted. When a lesser sum was announced, plans were made to reduce runway width from 150 feet to 100 feet and to reduce the thickness of the concrete. Both of these now will be restored in planning.

The runway will be of sufficient length and width to accommodate new DC 9 aircraft to be placed in service by Ozark Air Lines which serves the city.

Astronomers believe there are at least 200 billion stars in the vicinty of the earth.

Magazine Publisher Receives Soviet Photos

ST. LOUIS, Mo., AP -- The publisher of a small astronomy magazine was apparently selected by the Soviet Union to receive what may be the first full-disc photographs of earth taken from outer space.

The pictures, taken from a Russian communications satellite 25,000 miles away from earth were received last week by Donald Zahner of St. Louis, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said Saturday.

Zahner describes himself as "a basement astronomer." He is a publisher of the review of popular astronomy - a technical magazine with a circulation of 10,000.

Zahner said information he received from the Novosti Press Agency in Moscow said the pictures were taken on May 30 from the Molniya Lightning I satellite.

Quoting Georgi Colyshev, a Soviet hydrometerological service scientist, the press agency said, "It is for the first time that man can clearly see the vast spaces of our planet from such a great height."

The Post-Dispatch said American Tyros and Nimbus weather satellites have taken pictures of earth from 100 to 800 miles in outer space.

The newspaper said Zahner told them the pictures, taken with different camera systems, had been authenticated by U.S. government officials and Dr. Gerald Kuiper, director of the lunar and planetary laboratory of the University of Arizona in Tucson.

The Novosti Press Agency said the full-disc picture shows a sunlit part of the Northern Hemisphere from Western Siberia in the east to North America in the west and from the North Pole to the Indian Ocean and the Sahara Desert in the south.

A large-scale segment picture shows a more detailed view of cloud distribution over the North Atlantic and western part of the Arctic Ocean. Light areas in both photos denote clouded areas.

Zahner said he thinks he received the photos from the Soviet Embassy in Washington because of an article printed last year in his magazine concerning the 100th anniversity of the Russian Pulkova observatory.

"It is our opinion that Soviet officials were pleased with our treatment of this article and ultimately selected our magazine for the exclusive publication of these first photographs," Zahner told the Post-Dispatch.

Young Mother Badly Injured in Plane Crash Keeps Baby Safe

SEATTLE, Wash. AP - "Her courage and initiative saved our baby's life," says the husband of a young mother who managed to keep her 2-month-old baby and herself alive for two days in a plane wreckage on a cold, snowy mountain.

Loren Little, 24-year-old University of Washington medical student, spoke with pride as he told of the ordeal his wife, Karla, 25, underwent to save herself and their daughter, Laurie.

Mrs. Little's father and stepmother died in the crash on the snow-covered side of 9,671-foot Mt. St. Helens.

Mrs. Little suffered a broken back, broken ribs, a collapsed lung and frostbitten feet. Doctors reported she was resting comfortably in a hospital today. Her daughter has only a bruised forehead.

Little said his wife, who was rescued Saturday, recalled the ordeal clearly.

It began when Mrs. Little and her daughter were picked up in a rented plane by her father, Grant Erickson, 49, an executive of a radio supply company in Sioux Falls, S.D., and his wife.

They planned to fly to Norwalk, Calif., for the golden wedding anniversary of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Little.

"I was supposed to go with them," Little said. "At the last minute I changed my mind."

Flying south toward Portland, Ore., Thursday the four ran into heavy weather. Mrs. Little thinks a wingtip struck the rocky side of the mountain.

Erickson crash-landed the craft on a ledge at the 5,500-foot level. He and his wife were killed.

Little, describing his father-in-law as a "very cautious pilot, a sensible flier," noted that the last reports from the plane had its altitude as 8,500 feet. He believes Erickson fought to bring the crippled craft to its crash landing at a much lower altitude, "probably saving the life of my wife and child."

The young husband flew with the search planes, refusing to abandon hope through a long Friday and into Saturday afternoon.

Inside the broken plane, Little's wife, paralyzed below the waist, cuddled and nursed her baby.

Vainly through the long hours she tried to reach a bag containing supplemental food. She did manage to reach two baby blankets, wrap Laurie in one and stuff the other in a broken window to keep out wind-blown snow.

Rocks kept falling from above, bouncing and clattering on the wreckage.

Thursday she could hear the search planes. Friday she saw them but had no way or strength to signal. Finally, Saturday afternoon, a helicopter spotted the broken plane.

She asked the first rescuer, a paramedic, to "get the food and feed the baby."

Mother and infant were evacuated by helicopter to a hospital in Longview, Wash. There Little was reunited with his daughter and his wife, who was groggy from pain and exhaustion and had forgotten Loren had not been aboard the plane.

"She opened her eyes and looked at me for about 15 seconds," said Little. "Then she said, 'I thought you were dead.' "

Stroup Warns About Seed Peddlers

By TOM B. STROUP

It has been called to our attention that seed peddlers have been operating in the area.

Out of area seed salesmen sometimes come into an area to sell "so called unavailable" varieties that are superior to local grown varieties.

Cape Gets Grant For Airport

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Federal Aviation Agency has approved a grant of $891,000 for improvements at Cape Girardeau's Municipal Airport which will allow construction of a 6500-foot runway.

The sum will match $880,000 in municipal bonds for airport improvements approved by voters several months ago.

The sum is $49,000 less than the city had originally asked, but more than had originally been granted. When a lesser sum was announced, plans were made to reduce runway width from 150 feet to 100 feet and to reduce the thickness of the concrete. Both of these now will be restored in planning.

The runway will be of sufficient length and width to accommodate new DC 9 aircraft to be placed in service by Ozark Air Lines which serves the city.

West Plains Gets $2.2 Million Housing Loan

WASHINGTON AP - The Housing and Urban Development Department has approved a $2.2 million loan to West Plains Housing Authority for construction of 150 low-rent homes, 100 of them for elderly, Missouri members of Congress said today.

Astronomers believe there are at least 200 billion stars in the vicinty of the earth.

Magazine Publisher Receives Soviet Photos

ST. LOUIS, Mo., AP -- The publisher of a small astronomy magazine was apparently selected by the Soviet Union to receive what may be the first full-disc photographs of earth taken from outer space.

The pictures, taken from a Russian communications satellite 25,000 miles away from earth were received last week by Donald Zahner of St. Louis, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch said Saturday.

Zahner describes himself as "a basement astronomer." He is a publisher of the review of popular astronomy - a technical magazine with a circulation of 10,000.

Zahner said information he received from the Novosti Press Agency in Moscow said the pictures were taken on May 30 from the Molniya Lightning I satellite.

Quoting Georgi Colyshev, a Soviet hydrometerological service scientist, the press agency said, "It is for the first time that man can clearly see the vast spaces of our planet from such a great height."

The Post-Dispatch said American Tyros and Nimbus weather satellites have taken pictures of earth from 100 to 800 miles in outer space.

The newspaper said Zahner told them the pictures, taken with different camera systems, had been authenticated by U.S. government officials and Dr. Gerald Kuiper, director of the lunar and planetary laboratory of the University of Arizona in Tucson.

The Novosti Press Agency said the full-disc picture shows a sunlit part of the Northern Hemisphere from Western Siberia in the east to North America in the west and from the North Pole to the Indian Ocean and the Sahara Desert in the south.

A large-scale segment picture shows a more detailed view of cloud distribution over the North Atlantic and western part of the Arctic Ocean. Light areas in both photos denote clouded areas.

Zahner said he thinks he received the photos from the Soviet Embassy in Washington because of an article printed last year in his magazine concerning the 100th anniversity of the Russian Pulkova observatory.

"It is our opinion that Soviet officials were pleased with our treatment of this article and ultimately selected our magazine for the exclusive publication of these first photographs," Zahner told the Post-Dispatch.

Poplar Bluff Man Dies of Wound

SULLIVAN -- A Poplar Bluff, Mo., man died in a Sullivan, Mo., hospital of a gunshot wound of the head reportedly suffered several hours earlier while he was playing Russian roulette.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said the victim, Calvin M. Thornton, was shot with a .22 caliber revolver Saturday afternoon while riding in an auto at Sullivan with a friend, Russell Lee Vaughn, 19, of Poplar Bluff.

Mr. Thornton pulled the trigger several times before the weapon discharged, officers were told.

Essex Boy Held For Car Theft

ESSEX--A 14-year-old Essex boy was turned over to juvenile authorities in Stoddard County after he stole a car and wrecked it early Friday.

The boy wrecked a 1964 Chevrolet taken from Welton J. Clay, Essex, at 12:40 a.m. on Highway 114 a mile east of Essex.

A trooper said the car knocked down three reflector signs, tore off a bridge railing, crossed the highway and hit the railing on the left side and then went into the ditch.

The Missouri Juvenile Code prevents police officers from revealing the identity of persons under age 17 involved in law violations.

SEATO: LEAKY UMBRELLA

Military and diplomatic representatives of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) met in Canberra, Australia today.

AS A MILITARY ALLIANCE, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) is something less than what it says it is. With the exception of Pakistan, it is true, all SEATO's Asian members have made military commitments to the war in Viet Nam. But when you have said that you have not said very much.

Actually, the SEATO pact is at least a misnomer. Of its eight members -- the United States, Britain, France, Pakistan, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, and the Philippines-- only the last two are really Southeast Asian countries.

Australia has a task force in Viet Nam of some 4,500 men, with their own base and logistic support units. New Zealand is making a comparable contribution. This kind of demonstration is probably traceable less to SEATO obligations that to enlightened self-interest.

FRANCE has been an inactive member of SEATO for several years. The French thwarted any SEATO action for the defense of Laos at a meeting in Bangkok in 1961. Laos was removed from the protection of the leaky SEATO umbrella by the 1962 Geneva agreement.

After much pressure, France in 1964 agreed not to file a dissent and merely abstained from the SEATO pledge to South Viet Nam. Britain and the United States are expected not to ask France to leave the SEATO Ministerial Council when it meets in Canberra this month. But representatives of Thailand and the Philippines may complain about the presence of a French observer. Both governments have told the United States that they regard the French presence as a security risk.

Differences over policy among the United States, Britain, and France have kept SEATO from ever being an Asian NATO. As an entity, SEATO has scarcely flexed a muscle in the dozen years of its existence. Now French obstructionism appears threatening to NATO, but at least in the Atlantic Alliance the spirit of cooperation -- excluding France -- is greater than in SEATO.

COOPERATION in the Pacific, fortunately, is not limited to SEATO. Earlier this month, at a conference in Seoul, Japan joined with eight other Asian nations to form the Asian and Pacific Council (ASPAC), committed at the moment only to political, economic, and social cooperation. The grouping is not markedly anti-Communist. The door is open to neutrals. Nevertheless, member nations have privately discussed a possible transformation into a defense organization.

Aside from Australia and New Zealand -- and Japan -- other founding ASPAC nations are South Korea, Thailand, the Philippines, Nationalist China, Malaysia, and South Viet Nam. Laos attended the organizational meetings as an observer. Indonesia is considering entrance into ASPAC as well as into the revived Association of Southeast Asia, which comprises Malaysia, the Philippines, and Thailand.

Australia and New Zealand are linked militarily with Britain in the ANZAM agreement -- Australia, New Zealand and Malaya. The United States in addition to SEATO is covered by the 1951 ANZUS pact -- Australia, New Zealand, the U. S.

Australia and New Zealand, according to T. B. Millar, defense expert with the Australian National University, look to the distant time when "they will need no protecting, because of the stability and friendship of their Asiatic neighborhood." In the meantime, the American umbrella, holes and all, and a good deal of self-help are providing a precarious security in the Pacific.

FAISAL COMES TO CALL

Faisal Ibn Abdul Aziz al Saud, monarch of Saudi Arabia, will arrive in the United States on a state visit today.

KING FAISAL is not one of President Gamal Abdel Nasser's favorite characters. The rulers of Saudi Arabia and of the United Arab Republic are both Arabs and both Moslems, but there they part company. Each wants to become leader of the Middle East, and each is going about it in a different way.

Faisal seems intent on forging a loose federation of Islamic countries, whether Arab or not. If Faisal has his way, the Arab countries would align themselves with Iran, Turkey, Afghanistan and Pakistan, all of which are Moslem but non-Arab states.

Nasser's approach is more secular. Stressing socialism and ethnic unity or Pan-Arabism, the U. A. R. President has the support of leftist Syria, Algeria and Republican Yemen. Socialism and Islam, however, are not much more compatible than oil and water. Riots in several Egyptian villages last September were blamed on agitation by the Moslem Brotherhood, a fanatical religious group which opposes many of Nasser's Socialist policies.

FAISAL, who arrives in Washington today, is no stranger to the United States. He first came to this country in 1943 as a member of the royal party calling on President Roosevelt. Two years later, he headed the Saudi delegation at the United Nations conference in San Francisco. Faisal also led delegations to the U. N. General Assembly in 1947 and 1952, and visited Washington on two subsequent occasions for talks with Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy.

Saudi Arabia has begun cautiously to enter the 20th century since Faisal became king in 1963. While virtually all women remain in purdah, a few girls' schools have been opened. Jidda and Riyadh, the capital, now have television, although kissing scenes -- even those involving Mickey and Minnie Mouse -- are taboo. No thief has had his hand cut off in more than a year, and no adulteress has been stoned to death in six years.

This represents progress in a country that seemed irretrievably feudal only a decade ago. And the credit belongs almost exclusively to Faisal. By curbing the extravagance of the vast royal family, he erased the national debt in short order and embarked on an internal development program. Roads, water and agriculture were assigned top priority.

BUT FOREIGN AFFAIRS clearly are Faisal's first love. Earlier this year he visited Jordan and Pakistan, presumably to sound out sentiment on his scheme for "Islamic solidarity." His forthcoming talks with President Johnson probably will center on the Yemeni civil war, which in effect is a test of strength between Faisal and Nasser.

When it comes to charisma, Faisal need yield nothing to Nasser, the idol of the Egyptian masses. According to Peter Mansfield of the London Sunday Times, the king "has great personality and poise; for star quality, he is undoubtedly among the top 10 of the world's leaders." Faisal already has assurances of American support in the event of an armed U.A.R. attack on Saudi Arabia. A display of star quality in Washington could result in reaffirmation of that pledge.

Since man's emergence from the cave, technical advancement has invariably increased both the quantity and quality of employment and vastly bettered conditions of life for people generally. But many authorities have argued that computerized automation has introduced a new dimension and with the capability of sensing changing requirements and adjusting without human intervention could do away with the need for human supervision and labor.

A recent issue of U.S. News & World Report poses two questions: "'Are machines really throwing men out of work? Is automation the reason U.S., in its biggest boom, still have relatively high unemployment?"

In answering these questions, U.S. News quotes a recent address on "Automation and Jobs" by Dr. Yal Brozen, professor in the Graduate School of Business at the University of Chicago. He states flatly that automation does not create unemployment. In elaborating on this point, he observes that: "It may seem paradoxical to argue that automation causes displacement but does not cause unemployment. Many observers point to specific persons unemployed as a result of this phenomenon. They fail, however, to point to the unemployed who found jobs because of automation. They fail to recognize those who would have joined the jobless if new technology had not been developed. . . . the total number unemployed is smaller today than it would have been without automation, given the present wage structure."

Using an instance in the railroad industry, Dr. Brozen illustrates the job displacement, job creating effect of electronically operated computer controlled railroad classification yards. The Conway yard now in operation on the Pennsylvania Railroad, permits much more rapid classification of cars and has resulted in the movement of the same amount of freight with the equivalent of 13,000 fewer freight cars. The result -- a net saving in capital investment in railroad equipment amounting to nearly $70 million and the displacement of two hundred men. But lower costs permitted lowering of freight rates resulting in an increase in business for the railroad. Approximately 150 men and $5 million in capital were reabsorbed in other railroad departments.

Dr. Brozen concludes that, "A net displacement of 50 men occurred along with the release of over 60 million dollars in capital. The additional supply of capital made available to other industries increased the number of jobs available by about 400. . . ." And it is unquestionably true that in situations where wages have been raised to artifically high levels above what would have been established under free market conditions, automation has been the alternative to disastrous unemployment.

What opportunities will there be for unskilled labor? Charles E. Silberman, writing in a recent issue of Fortune magazine, states that "Because it may actually be easier to mechanize or automate clerical, managerial, and professional work than the kinds of blue-collar work that still remain, current discussions of the labor market may be exaggerating the future demand for professional and technical workers and underestimating the future demand for blue-collar workers." It is becoming apparent that jobs may change while the level of skill required to perform them remains the same.

It is yet too early to discern the structure of employment that automation will finally bring. But is now apparent that early predictions concerning the obsolescence of man were not warranted. The human brain and hand are the most responsive and versatile control and manipulative devices ever created -- they are not to be replaced soon.

ANTIBIOTIC PIRATES

One of this country's leading producers of prescription drugs recently sent a letter to every doctor in the United States announcing that it had reduced prices to pharmacies for a number of antibiotics that are in wide use.

However, it also said, the prices are not competitive with those of certain imported drugs of the same nature. And thereby hangs a sorry tale.

The imported drugs involved are an example of industrial piracy. They are a direct infringement on U.S. patents, on U.S. research and on costly U.S. achievement.

So the letter to the doctors went on to say: "We can emphatically state that if we are to continue to spend millions of dollars a year on drug research; if we are to pay American wage scales to the people in our plants producing our drugs; if we are to maintain a sales and marketing organization to promote to you the fruits of our research in keen competition with others in our industry in a free enterprise system; if we are to pay very significant sums by way of federal, state and local taxes -- if we are to do all these things and at the end of the year's activity turn over a little better than four cents to our stockholders for every dollar of our sales by way of a modest return on their investment, then we will never be in a position to compete with antibiotic pirates who contribute nothing to the development of a drug and find their haven in a country that does not give any recognition to drug patents; who pay wages and offer working conditions which are substandard in comparison to those in this country and; finally, who contribute nothing in the way of taxes to support our democratic institutions."

Enough said! In the light of these undeniable facts, do the drugs produced by the foreign pirates seem "cheap"?

It wasn't long after the town grocer gave his beautiful teenage daughter a job as clerk in his store that the local wolves began dropping by almost daily with requests for items stocked on the highest shelves, since each time the pretty little thing had to climb up a ladder to fill their orders, they were assured a spectacular view. Being as naive as she was attractive, the daughter didn't catch on; she tried rearranging the stock a few times, but no matter how she planned it, her male customers always seemed to ask for the items she put at the top. One day an elderly gent happened to enter the store while a contingent of these young cads was sending the poor girl up and down the ladder, each one in turn ordering a loaf of raisin bread from the top shelf. Hoping to save herself an additional trip while still aloft on her eighth successive climb to the same height, the girl called down to the senior citizen, "Is yours raisin, too?"

"Nope," said the old-timer. "But it's twitchin' a mite."

EUROPE IN A NEW ROLE

When the 20th century began, every fifth person in the world was a European. Sixty years later, the ratio was one out of seven. By the year 2000, only one out of 10 persons in this crowded world will live in Europe.

These statistics are not so much a measure of the "decline of the West" as of its eclipse.

It is not that Europe's population is stagnant. Excluding the Soviet Union, it stands at some 430 million today and is expected to increase to 600 million by the end of the century. Total world population by then, however, will have soared to six billion.

Both the present and projected populations of Europe far exceed those of either the United States or the U.S.S.R. Yet even considered as a whole, the power and influence of the continent which once governed the affairs of the world rank well behind those of either the giant of the East or of the West. This is true even in science and technology, two things which once transformed Europe and in turn made her midwife to the birth of the modern world.

In 1962, says Science magazine, the United States spent nearly twice as much of its gross national income on scientific research and development as Europe. In that year the United States and U.S.S.R. had more than 400,000 scientists and engineers at work while Europe had 150,000.

Adding to this imbalance, the United States absorbs about five per cent of the cream of Europe's yearly output of scientists and engineers -- the so-called "brain drain."

In a recent year, West European countries paid five and a half times as much for rights to use U.S. patents as Americans paid Europeans.

Europe, of course, cannot yet be considered as a whole, despite the beginning steps taken by its major nations toward economic, if not political, unity. Old nationalistic barriers to the free interflow of people and ideas remain the greatest obstacles to the continent's realizing its full potential in the last half of the 20th century.

WORDS AND MUSIC

It will certainly be no "long hot summer" for those young Americans who, as they vacation over our beautiful land, speak and sing for freedom. They are sure to find a very special satisfaction in turning their travels into tours for freedom. And one of the rich rewards they can expect to reap is a crop of new friends.

People of all ages and stations in life are attracted by the sight and sound of young people raising their voices in speech and song on behalf of American ideals. Patriotism is not out of date so far as the youth of America are concerned. Certain it is that the example they set will inspire others.

The purpose of the young vacationeers for freedom is completely serious, but the carrying out of that purpose is as much fun as any good game. Travel itself is fun, of course, especially for youth. And the pleasure is multiplied when the young travelers speak their piece for freedom and raise their clear voices in singing the songs of patriotism.

They will be heard. In a time of national trial, most Americans are sick and tired of speeches and fake folk songs that sound a theme of hopelessness and hate. Americans are not by nature either haters or hopeless. The positive approach of patriotic youth will have a powerful appeal for most of our citizens.

American youth is on the move this summer -- and moving in the right direction. Adults have a great opportunity to encourage and assist the young travelers who deplore DeGaulle and use their vacations to help spread freedom's message. HLH.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- There was great human drama behind the spectacle of the former assistants of Sen. Tom Dodd, sitting all alone, one by one, at the Senate Ethics Committee witness table while a battery of Wall Street lawyers attempted to tear down their testimony.

Dodd's attorneys are Cahill, Gordon, Reindel and Ohl, who represent Standard Oil, RCA, and some of the biggest corporations in the United States. Even attorneys have been on hand to defend Dodd, four of them sitting at the witness table, three in the front row just behind, unknown to the public, passing notes up to chief attorney John Sonnett.

The public sees much of this. But what it does not see and can never fully realize is the soul - searching that Dodd's former staff members went through before they made the break with their boss. Also the public does not know the sacrifices they have made financially through loss of work.

There was strong indignation among other senators at first, especially friends of Sen. Dodd's, that any senator's staff should use his files against him. Latterly there has been a feeling on the part of many senators that if they were violating their oath of office they could not blame those close to them for informing regarding their activities.

The laws of most states require that anyone who witnesses a crime must report that crime. The Internal Revenue laws also provide for rewards to encourage informants to report on erring taxpayers.

OUT OF WORK

It was after the difficulty decision by Dodd's staff to break with him that their troubles began.

James Boyd, his former administrative assistant, has been out of work for months. For a time he served on the staff of the House Public Works Committee. But when Speaker John McCormack learned of this he asked Rep. George Fallon of Baltimore to abolish Boyd's job. He has been out of work ever since.

Mrs. Marjorie Carpenter, Dodd's former secretary, at first got a position with the civil rights committee of the American Bar Association, but resigned when she felt that her testimony in the Dodd case might be embarrassing to the committee.

Later she was employed by the law firm of Arnold and Porter, informing them in advance that she was involved in the Dodd case and doubtless would be called upon to testify.

However, Sen. Dodd learned where she was working and phoned a member of the Arnold and Porter firm to protest. Mrs. Carpenter was promptly fired.

Miss Terry Golden, another member of Dodd's secretarial staff, was employed by Chief Judge David Bazelon of the U. S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia, but was dropped. Miss Golden is now keeping secret where she is employed for fear pressure will be brought on her present employer. Other former members of Dodd's staff are also being silent regarding their present employment.

Boyd and Mrs. Carpenter have been without jobs or any income during much of the spring. This they knew was one of the hazards they faced before they made the decision to secure the evidence regarding the senator's unethical conduct.

SPACE PROBLEMS

At a recent hearing, the House Appropriations Committee was listening to evidence about spacetrack, which maintains surveillance on over 1,800 objects that have been shot into orbit.

"Is there really a garbage problem up there at this stage of the game?" asked Rep. Dan Flood, D-Pa.

"Not in the sense of danger of a collision, but in keeping track of what is up there," replied Alexander H. Flax, assistant secretary of the air force.

"Why do you believe there is no danger?" inquired Flood.

"Because of the tremendous amount of volume that these 1,800 objects are disposed in," said Flax. "It is like the probability of stepping on a flea in Grand Central Station. It would happen, but it is highly unlikely."

KENNEDY CALLING LONG

At the time Sen. Ed Long, Democrat of Missouri, was investigating wire tapping and tracing part of it back to the justice department when Bobby Kennedy was attorney general, Sen. Russell Long, Democrat of Louisiana, got a telephone call.

His secretary announced the call in advance with: "Sen. Robert Kennedy of New York is calling."

When Sen. Kennedy got on the line he said:

"Sen. Long, I must take issue with you on what you've been saying about my work as attorney general."

And Kennedy proceeded at some length to object to the wire - tapping charges.

Finally Sen. Long interrupted.

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Sen. Long of Louisiana. "I haven't said anything about you and the justice department. I don't know anything about these wiretapping charges."

"Aren't you Sen. Long?" asked Kennedy.

"I'm Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana," was the reply.

"Oh, you're the nice Long," said Sen. Kennedy.

"Which Sen. Kennedy are you?" asked Sen. Long.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Hoffa Planning to Rewrite Teamsters' Constitution So He Can Call National General Strike.

Washington, D. C.: -- Jimmy Hoffa must have thrown three coins in the Fontaine -- bleau -- a Miami Beach hotel which oozes a culture to which today's teamsters' leadership has enthusiastically grown accustomed. Hoffa has returned there to direct -- and that word is carefully chosen -- the massive teamsters' quinary convention.

For Jimmy, "the kid" or "the caliph" or "the champ" (depending on the intimacy of the particular convention delegation), it is all work and no play.

This is Hoffa's most vital convention-- not because he may next convene in a federal "pen" -- but because he is preparing to reach for industrial power achieved by any civilian in the free world.

Hidden in the 125 resolutions being prepared by the committee for action at the 19th Teamsters' Convention are several constitutional changes which could shake the land.

They are, in effect, intended of labor men, should they ever follow him, the mechanism with which to call a general strike.

They could decide the day the nation shall stand still.

Furthermore, if Hoffa's strategem works out, it will all be very legal. From his special command post in the Fontainebleau, Hoffa will make certain that the 2,112 delegates over at the convention auditorium vote unanimously for a constitutional change which will give him the actual power over all teamsters' strikes.

After the constitution is rewritten in Miami Beach, Hoffa will have the authority to approve or veto any stoppage called by any one of the teamsters' 837 locals. He will grant approval, or will ban a walkout, depending on whether the local teamsters' union is in the "coordinated front."

What Hoffa wants is that each local coordinate its employer contracts so they expire on the same day. Then he would have that day coincide with the expiration of contracts signed by other teamsters' locals in every city. This common expiration date would match that of other regions.

Since Hoffa has some industry - wide contracts, he would have all locals in the same industry "expire" their contracts on the same day.

Thus he would weave a nationwide fabric of labor - management pacts covering whole chunks of the country and vast industries -- such as construction.

On the theory that no law would be broken if the teamsters quit en masse, shouting, "No contract, no work," Hoffa could shut down entire cities, combinations of contiguous states, or an industry -- say, milk deliveries or food and vegetables trucking.

Naturally, many regional teamster officials aren't dashing up to Hoffa's suite, quill in hand to sign over authority for the calling of local strikes. So it will take some changes in the teamsters' constitution to give the General President the power to force uniform contracts and expiration dates.

Your money is as safe as though you were buying part of the Federal Reserve Bank if you wager that Hoffa will have his new constitution. But that for "Jimmy" is just the beginning.

For some time now he has been talking with fairly powerful labor leaders in other fields.

His arguments are simple: Have your contracts expire on the same day as ours. Then when you come to us, we can help you legally. We'll be able to beat the ban on secondary boycotts.

Furthermore, Hoffa states that the time has come to give the U. S. employers a dose of what the French and Italian unions give their adversaries -- shut down most of the nation for 24 or 48 hours; idle entire industries; black out whole cities, transit, power and fuel deliveries et al.

This is the development to observe at the coming behemoth conclave. For behind Hoffa is a treasury of liquid millions, assets of $50 million, and a new dues structure which will bring the National Headquarters almost $30 million annually.

With such funds Hoffa can buy more airplanes for his organizers; go into the factories in the field (citrus and vegetable ranches); unionize everything from filling stations to sheriffs' headquarters; beat the drums for unionization of professional football players and throw considerable weight around amongst some mighty nervous congressmen.

All this he can do with peace of mind. There will be no opposition. Maybe just a rebel yell or two. But all his vice presidents are going down the line with him.

The only line he'll cross alone, should it come to that, would be the threshold to a cell.

Meanwhile, first things first. Power, Hoffa reckons, does not come before a fall.

SEATO: LEAKY UMBRELLA

Military and diplomatic representatives of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) met in Canberra, Australia today.

AS A MILITARY ALLIANCE, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) is something less than what it says it is. With the exception of Pakistan, it is true, all SEATO's Asian members have made military commitments to the war in Viet Nam. But when you have said that you have not said very much.

Actually, the SEATO pact is at least a misnomer. Of its eight members -- the United States, Britain, France, Pakistan, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, and the Philippines--only the last two are really Southeast Asian countries.

Australia has a task force in Viet Nam of some 4,500 men, with their own base and logistic support units. New Zealand is making a comparable contribution. This kind of demonstration is probably traceable less to SEATO obligations that to enlightened self-interest.

FRANCE has been an inactive member of SEATO for several years. The French thwarted any SEATO action for the defense of Laos at a meeting in Bangkok in 1961. Laos was removed from the protection of the leaky SEATO umbrella by the 1962 Geneva agreement.

After much pressure, France in 1964 agreed not to file a dissent and merely abstained from the SEATO pledge to South Viet Nam. Britain and the United States are expected not to ask France to leave the SEATO Ministerial Council when it meets in Canberra this month. But representatives of Thailand and the Philippines may complain about the presence of a French observer. Both governments have told the United States that they regard the French presence as a security risk.

Differences over policy among the United States, Britain, and France have kept SEATO from ever being an Asian NATO. As an entity, SEATO has scarcely flexed a muscle in the dozen years of its existence. Now French obstructionism appears threatening to NATO, but at least in the Atlantic Alliance the spirit of cooperation -- excluding France -- is greater than in SEATO.

COOPERATION in the Pacific, fortunately, is not limited to SEATO. Earlier this month, at a conference in Seoul, Japan joined with eight other Asian nations to form the Asian and Pacific Council (ASPAC), committed at the moment only to political, economic, and social cooperation. The grouping is not markedly anti-Communist. The door is open to neutrals. Nevertheless, member nations have privately discussed a possible transformation into a defense organization.

Aside from Australia and New Zealand -- and Japan -- other founding ASPAC nations are South Korea, Thailand, the Philippines, Nationalist China, Malaysia, and South Viet Nam. Laos attended the organizational meetings as an observer. Indonesia is considering entrance into ASPAC as well as into the revived Association of Southeast Asia, which comprises Malaysia, the Philippines, and Thailand.

Australia and New Zealand are linked militarily with Britain in the ANZAM agreement -- Australia, New Zealand and Malaya. The United States in addition to SEATO is covered by the 1951 ANZUS pact -- Australia, New Zealand, the U. S.

Australia and New Zealand, according to T. B. Millar, defense expert with the Australian National University, look to the distant time when "they will need no protecting, because of the stability and friendship of their Asiatic neighborhood." In the meantime, the American umbrella, holes and all, and a good deal of self-help are providing a precarious security in the Pacific.

FAISAL COMES TO CALL

Faisal Ibn Abdul Aziz al Saud, monarch of Saudi Arabia, will arrive in the United States on a state visit today.

KING FAISAL is not one of President Gamal Abdel Nasser's favorite characters. The rulers of Saudi Arabia and of the United Arab Republic are both Arabs and both Moslems, but there they part company. Each wants to become leader of the Middle East, and each is going about it in a different way.

Faisal seems intent on forging a loose federation of Islamic countries, whether Arab or not. If Faisal has his way, the Arab countries would align themselves with Iran, Turkey, Afghanistan and Pakistan, all of which are Moslem but non-Arab states.

Nasser's approach is more secular. Stressing socialism and ethnic unity or Pan-Arabism, the U. A. R. President has the support of leftist Syria, Algeria and Republican Yemen. Socialism and Islam, however, are not much more compatible than oil and water. Riots in several Egyptian villages last September were blamed on agitation by the Moslem Brotherhood, a fanatical religious group which opposes many of Nasser's Socialist policies.

FAISAL, who arrives in Washington today, is no stranger to the United States. He first came to this country in 1943 as a member of the royal party calling on President Roosevelt. Two years later, he headed the Saudi delegation at the United Nations conference in San Francisco. Faisal also led delegations to the U. N. General Assembly in 1947 and 1952, and visited Washington on two subsequent occasions for talks with Presidents Eisenhower and Kennedy.

Saudi Arabia has begun cautiously to enter the 20th century since Faisal became king in 1963. While virtually all women remain in purdah, a few girls' schools have been opened. Jidda and Riyadh, the capital, now have television, although kissing scenes -- even those involving Mickey and Minnie Mouse -- are taboo. No thief has had his hand cut off in more than a year, and no adulteress has been stoned to death in six years.

This represents progress in a country that seemed irretrievably feudal only a decade ago. And the credit belongs almost exclusively to Faisal. By curbing the extravagance of the vast royal family, he erased the national debt in short order and embarked on an internal development program. Roads, water and agriculture were assigned top priority.

BUT FOREIGN AFFAIRS clearly are Faisal's first love. Earlier this year he visited Jordan and Pakistan, presumably to sound out sentiment on his scheme for "Islamic solidarity." His forthcoming talks with President Johnson probably will center on the Yemeni civil war, which in effect is a test of strength between Faisal and Nasser.

When it comes to charisma, Faisal need yield nothing to Nasser, the idol of the Egyptian masses. According to Peter Mansfield of the London Sunday Times, the king "has great personality and poise; for star quality, he is undoubtedly among the top 10 of the world's leaders." Faisal already has assurances of American support in the event of an armed U.A.R. attack on Saudi Arabia. A display of star quality in Washington could result in reaffirmation of that pledge.

Since man's emergence from the cave, technical advancement has invariably increased both the quantity and quality of employment and vastly bettered conditions of life for people generally. But many authorities have argued that computerized automation has introduced a new dimension and with the capability of sensing changing requirements and adjusting without human intervention could do away with the need for human supervision and labor.

A recent issue of U.S. News & World Report poses two questions: "'Are machines really throwing men out of work? Is automation the reason U.S., in its biggest boom, still have relatively high unemployment?"

In answering these questions, U.S. News quotes a recent address on "Automation and Jobs" by Dr. Yal Brozen, professor in the Graduate School of Business at the University of Chicago. He states flatly that automation does not create unemployment. In elaborating on this point, he observes that: "It may seem paradoxical to argue that automation causes displacement but does not cause unemployment. Many observers point to specific persons unemployed as a result of this phenomenon. They fail, however, to point to the unemployed who found jobs because of automation. They fail to recognize those who would have joined the jobless if new technology had not been developed. . . . the total number unemployed is smaller today than it would have been without automation, given the present wage structure."

Using an instance in the railroad industry, Dr. Brozen illustrates the job displacement, job creating effect of electronically operated computer controlled railroad classification yards. The Conway yard now in operation on the Pennsylvania Railroad, permits much more rapid classification of cars and has resulted in the movement of the same amount of freight with the equivalent of 13,000 fewer freight cars. The result -- a net saving in capital investment in railroad equipment amounting to nearly $70 million and the displacement of two hundred men. But lower costs permitted lowering of freight rates resulting in an increase in business for the railroad. Approximately 150 men and $5 million in capital were reabsorbed in other railroad departments.

Dr. Brozen concludes that, "A net displacement of 50 men occurred along with the release of over 60 million dollars in capital. The additional supply of capital made available to other industries increased the number of jobs available by about 400. . ." And it is unquestionably true that in situations where wages have been raised to artifically high levels above what would have been established under free market conditions, automation has been the alternative to disastrous unemployment.

What opportunities will there be for unskilled labor? Charles E. Silberman, writing in a recent issue of Fortune magazine, states that "Because it may actually be easier to mechanize or automate clerical, managerial, and professional work than the kinds of blue-collar work that still remain, current discussions of the labor market may be exaggerating the future demand for professional and technical workers and underestimating the future demand for blue-collar workers." It is becoming apparent that jobs may change while the level of skill required to perform them remains the same.

It is yet too early to discern the structure of employment that automation will finally bring. But is now apparent that early predictions concerning the obsolescence of man were not warranted. The human brain and hand are the most responsive and versatile control and manipulative devices ever created -- they are not to be replaced soon.

ANTIBIOTIC PIRATES

One of this country's leading producers of prescription drugs recently sent a letter to every doctor in the United States announcing that it had reduced prices to pharmacies for a number of antibiotics that are in wide use.

However, it also said, the prices are not competitive with those of certain imported drugs of the same nature. And thereby hangs a sorry tale.

The imported drugs involved are an example of industrial piracy. They are a direct infringement on U.S. patents, on U.S. research and on costly U.S. achievement.

So the letter to the doctors went on to say: "We can emphatically state that if we are to continue to spend millions of dollars a year on drug research; if we are to pay American wage scales to the people in our plants producing our drugs; if we are to maintain a sales and marketing organization to promote to you the fruits of our research in keen competition with others in our industry in a free enterprise system; if we are to pay very significant sums by way of federal, state and local taxes -- if we are to do all these things and at the end of the year's activity turn over a little better than four cents to our stockholders for every dollar of our sales by way of a modest return on their investment, then we will never be in a position to compete with antibiotic pirates who contribute nothing to the development of a drug and find their haven in a country that does not give any recognition to drug patents; who pay wages and offer working conditions which are substandard in comparison to those in this country and; finally, who contribute nothing in the way of taxes to support our democratic institutions."

Enough said! In the light of these undeniable facts, do the drugs produced by the foreign pirates seem "cheap"?

It wasn't long after the town grocer gave his beautiful teenage daughter a job as clerk in his store that the local wolves began dropping by almost daily with requests for items stocked on the highest shelves, since each time the pretty little thing had to climb up a ladder to fill their orders, they were assured a spectacular view. Being as naive as she was attractive, the daughter didn't catch on; she tried rearranging the stock a few times, but no matter how she planned it, her male customers always seemed to ask for the items she put at the top. One day an elderly gent happened to enter the store while a contingent of these young cads was sending the poor girl up and down the ladder, each one in turn ordering a loaf of raisin bread from the top shelf. Hoping to save herself an additional trip while still aloft on her eighth successive climb to the same height, the girl called down to the senior citizen, "Is yours raisin, too?"

"Nope," said the old-timer. "But it's twitchin' a mite."

EUROPE IN A NEW ROLE

When the 20th century began, every fifth person in the world was a European. Sixty years later, the ratio was one out of seven. By the year 2000, only one out of 10 persons in this crowded world will live in Europe.

These statistics are not so much a measure of the "decline of the West" as of its eclipse.

It is not that Europe's population is stagnant. Excluding the Soviet Union, it stands at some 430 million today and is expected to increase to 600 million by the end of the century. Total world population by then, however, will have soared to six billion.

Both the present and projected populations of Europe far exceed those of either the United States or the U.S.S.R. Yet even considered as a whole, the power and influence of the continent which once governed the affairs of the world rank well behind those of either the giant of the East or of the West. This is true even in science and technology, two things which once transformed Europe and in turn made her midwife to the birth of the modern world.

In 1962, says Science magazine, the United States spent nearly twice as much of its gross national income on scientific research and development as Europe. In that year the United States and U.S.S.R. had more than 400,000 scientists and engineers at work while Europe had 150,000.

Adding to this imbalance, the United States absorbs about five per cent of the cream of Europe's yearly output of scientists and engineers -- the so-called "brain drain."

In a recent year, West European countries paid five and a half times as much for rights to use U.S. patents as Americans paid Europeans.

Europe, of course, cannot yet be considered as a whole, despite the beginning steps taken by its major nations toward economic, if not political, unity. Old nationalistic barriers to the free interflow of people and ideas remain the greatest obstacles to the continent's realizing its full potential in the last half of the 20th century.

WORDS AND MUSIC

It will certainly be no "long hot summer" for those young Americans who, as they vacation over our beautiful land, speak and sing for freedom. They are sure to find a very special satisfaction in turning their travels into tours for freedom. And one of the rich rewards they can expect to reap is a crop of new friends.

People of all ages and stations in life are attracted by the sight and sound of young people raising their voices in speech and song on behalf of American ideals. Patriotism is not out of date so far as the youth of America are concerned. Certain it is that the example they set will inspire others.

The purpose of the young vacationeers for freedom is completely serious, but the carrying out of that purpose is as much fun as any good game. Travel itself is fun, of course, especially for youth. And the pleasure is multiplied when the young travelers speak their piece for freedom and raise their clear voices in singing the songs of patriotism.

They will be heard. In a time of national trial, most Americans are sick and tired of speeches and fake folk songs that sound a theme of hopelessness and hate. Americans are not by nature either haters or hopeless. The positive approach of patriotic youth will have a powerful appeal for most of our citizens.

American youth is on the move this summer -- and moving in the right direction. Adults have a great opportunity to encourage and assist the young travelers who deplore DeGaulle and use their vacations to help spread freedom's message. HLH.

Inside Labor

Hoffa Planning to Rewrite Teamsters' Constitution So He Can Call National General Strike.

Washington, D. C.: -- Jimmy Hoffa must have thrown three coins in the Fontaine -- bleau -- a Miami Beach hotel which oozes a culture to which today's teamsters' leadership has enthusiastically grown accustomed. Hoffa has returned there to direct -- and that word is carefully chosen -- the massive teamsters' quinary convention.

For Jimmy, "the kid" or "the caliph" or "the champ" (depending on the intimacy of the particular convention delegation), it is all work and no play.

This is Hoffa's most vital convention-- not because he may next convene in a federal "pen" -- but because he is preparing to reach for industrial power achieved by any civilian in the free world.

Hidden in the 125 resolutions being prepared by the committee for action at the 19th Teamsters' Convention are several constitutional changes which could shake the land.

They are, in effect, intended of labor men, should they ever follow him, the mechanism with which to call a general strike.

They could decide the day the nation shall stand still.

Furthermore, if Hoffa's strategem works out, it will all be very legal. From his special command post in the Fontainebleau, Hoffa will make certain that the 2,112 delegates over at the convention auditorium vote unanimously for a constitutional change which will give him the actual power over all teamsters' strikes.

After the constitution is rewritten in Miami Beach, Hoffa will have the authority to approve or veto any stoppage called by any one of the teamsters' 837 locals. He will grant approval, or will ban a walkout, depending on whether the local teamsters' union is in the "coordinated front."

What Hoffa wants is that each local coordinate its employer contracts so they expire on the same day. Then he would have that day coincide with the expiration of contracts signed by other teamsters' locals in every city. This common expiration date would match that of other regions.

Since Hoffa has some industry - wide contracts, he would have all locals in the same industry "expire" their contracts on the same day.

Thus he would weave a nationwide fabric of labor - management pacts covering whole chunks of the country and vast industries -- such as construction.

On the theory that no law would be broken if the teamsters quit en masse, shouting, "No contract, no work," Hoffa could shut down entire cities, combinations of contiguous states, or an industry -- say, milk deliveries or food and vegetables trucking.

Naturally, many regional teamster officials aren't dashing up to Hoffa's suite, quill in hand to sign over authority for the calling of local strikes. So it will take some changes in the teamsters' constitution to give the General President the power to force uniform contracts and expiration dates.

Your money is as safe as though you were buying part of the Federal Reserve Bank if you wager that Hoffa will have his new constitution. But that for "Jimmy" is just the beginning.

For some time now he has been talking with fairly powerful labor leaders in other fields.

His arguments are simple: Have your contracts expire on the same day as ours. Then when you come to us, we can help you legally. We'll be able to beat the ban on secondary boycotts.

Furthermore, Hoffa states that the time has come to give the U. S. employers a dose of what the French and Italian unions give their adversaries -- shut down most of the nation for 24 or 48 hours; idle entire industries; black out whole cities, transit, power and fuel deliveries et al.

This is the development to observe at the coming behemoth conclave. For behind Hoffa is a treasury of liquid millions, assets of $50 million, and a new dues structure which will bring the National Headquarters almost $30 million annually.

With such funds Hoffa can buy more airplanes for his organizers; go into the factories in the field (citrus and vegetable ranches); unionize everything from filling stations to sheriffs headquarters; beat the drums for unionization of professional football players and throw considerable weight around amongst some mighty nervous congressmen.

All this he can do with peace of mind. There will be no opposition. Maybe just a rebel yell or two. But all his vice presidents are going down the line with him.

The only line he'll cross alone, should it come to that would be the threshold to a cell.

Meanwhile, first things first. Power, Hoffa reckons, does not come before a fall.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- There was great human drama behind the spectacle of the former assistants of Sen. Tom Dodd, sitting all alone, one by one, at the Senate Ethics Committee witness table while a battery of Wall Street lawyers attempted to tear down their testimony.

Dodd's attorneys are Cahill, Gordon, Reindel and Ohl, who represent Standard Oil, RCA, and some of the biggest corporations in the United States. Even attorneys have been on hand to defend Dodd, four of them sitting at the witness table, three in the front row just behind, unknown to the public, passing notes up to chief attorney John Sonnett.

The public sees much of this. But what it does not see and can never fully realize is the soul - searching that Dodd's former staff members went through before they made the break with their boss. Also the public does not know the sacrifices they have made financially through loss of work.

There was strong indignation among other senators at first, especially friends of Sen. Dodd's, that any senator's staff should use his files against him. Latterly there has been a feeling on the part of many senators that if they were violating their oath of office they could not blame those close to them for informing regarding their activities.

The laws of most states require that anyone who witnesses a crime must report that crime. The Internal Revenue laws also provide for rewards to encourage informants to report on erring taxpayers.

OUT OF WORK

It was after the difficulty decision by Dodd's staff to break with him that their troubles began.

James Boyd, his former administrative assistant, has been out of work for months. For a time he served on the staff of the House Public Works Committee. But when Speaker John McCormack learned of this he asked Rep. George Fallon of Baltimore to abolish Boyd's job. He has been out of work ever since.

Mrs. Marjorie Carpenter, Dodd's former secretary, at first got a position with the civil rights committee of the American Bar Association, but resigned when she felt that her testimony in the Dodd case might be embarrassing to the committee.

Later she was employed by the law firm of Arnold and Porter, informing them in advance that she was involved in the Dodd case and doubtless would be called upon to testify.

However, Sen. Dodd learned where she was working and phoned a member of the Arnold and Porter firm to protest. Mrs. Carpenter was promptly fired.

Miss Terry Golden, another member of Dodd's secretarial staff, was employed by Chief Judge David Bazelon of the U. S. Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia, but was dropped. Miss Golden is now keeping secret where she is employed for fear pressure will be brought on her present employer. Other former members of Dodd's staff are also being silent regarding their present employment.

Boyd and Mrs. Carpenter have been without jobs or any income during much of the spring. This they knew was one of the hazards they faced before they made the decision to secure the evidence regarding the senator's unethical conduct.

SPACE PROBLEMS

At a recent hearing, the House Appropriations Committee was listening to evidence about spacetrack, which maintains surveillance on over 1,800 objects that have been shot into orbit.

"Is there really a garbage problem up there at this stage of the game?" asked Rep. Dan Flood, D-Pa.

"Not in the sense of danger of a collision, but in keeping track of what is up there," replied Alexander H. Flax, assistant secretary of the air force.

"Why do you believe there is no danger?" inquired Flood.

"Because of the tremendous amount of volume that these 1,800 objects are disposed in," said Flax. "It is like the probability of stepping on a flea in Grand Central Station. It would happen, but it is highly unlikely."

KENNEDY CALLING LONG

At the time Sen. Ed Long, Democrat of Missouri, was investigating wire tapping and tracing part of it back to the justice department when Bobby Kennedy was attorney general, Sen. Russell Long, Democrat of Louisiana, got a telephone call.

His secretary announced the call in advance with: "Sen. Robert Kennedy of New York is calling."

When Sen. Kennedy got on the line he said:

"Sen. Long, I must take issue with you on what you've been saying about my work as attorney general."

And Kennedy proceeded at some length to object to the wire - tapping charges.

Finally Sen. Long interrupted.

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Sen. Long of Louisiana. "I haven't said anything about you and the justice department. I don't know anything about these wire-tapping charges."

"Aren't you Sen. Long?" asked Kennedy.

"I'm Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana," was the reply.

"Oh, you're the nice Long," said Sen. Kennedy.

"Which Sen. Kennedy are you?" asked Sen. Long.

Sharon Ann Jackson Is June Bride of Wendell Lee Young

On the evening of Saturday, June 18, Miss Sharon Ann Jackson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zelbert T. Jackson, 707 East Kathleen, became the bride of Wendell Lee Young, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Adell Young, Jackson, Tenn.

The Rev. Nick Harris, cousin of the groom, from the Calvary Baptist church, Humboldt, Tenn., and the Rev. James Hackney officiated at the double ring ceremony in the First Baptist church.

CHURCH DECORATIONS

The altar was graced with two arrangements of majestic yellow and white daisies and four candelabrum entwined with greenery and white bows and holding glowing white tapers. A background arch of twelve tapers and greenery enhanced the setting.

WEDDING MUSIC

Preceding the ceremony Miss Lyn Farris, former college roommate of the bride, presented pre-nuptial organ selections and accompanied Miss Shirley Altom, Sunday school teacher of the bride, as she sang "I Love Thee" preceding the ceremony and "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte as the bride and groom knelt at the prieu dieu for the benediction.

GIVEN BY FATHER

To the strains of the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin", the bride entered the sanctuary on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The former Miss Jackson wore a pencil slim floor-length gown of imported silk organza and imported French rose-point lace. The scooped neckline was edged with French cording. The lace was used as a cardinal cape effect and extended in front to the empress waist forming a V effect. A very full train of organza swept to a chapel length. Long sheer sleeves of the organza formed lily points over the hands and were closed with tiny self-covered buttons. The front of the bodice was etched with pearl and sequin embroidery.

She wore a double tiara of seed pearls which secured the elbow-length, three-tiered French imported veil of illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of white majestic daisies centered with a yellow-throated orchid and long white streamers tied in many lovers' knots. The traditional something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue theme was carried out in her accessories.

BRIDE'S ATTENDANTS

Preceding the bride down the aisle was little Miss Letta Beth Williams, Jackson, Tenn., as flower girl and young Mark Varble, Chaffee, as ring bearer. Mrs. Edward Jackson served as her sister-in-law's matron of honor and Miss Joan Dyer, sorority sister from Newburn, Tenn., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Nick Harris, cousin of the groom, Miss Janet Bain and Miss Carol Blankenship, Jackson, Tenn., both sorority sisters of the bride.

The attendants were identically dressed in yellow floor-length sheath frocks of nylon blend crepe with tiny cap sleeves and modified empire waistlines. Headpieces of yellow flowers secured the three-tiered veils of tulle which completed their costumes. Each carried a white lace fan with white and yellow majestic daisies from which fell yellow and green streamers tied in lovers' knots.

BRIDEGROOM'S ATTENDANTS

Young chose as his best man the bride's brother, Edward Jackson, and groomsmen, Donald Harris and Tommy Dacus, Jackson, Tenn., both cousins of the groom. Melvern Wondell, Chaffee, and Ike Palmer, Jackson, fraternity brothers, also served as usher-groomsmen and lighted the candles. All men of the wedding party wore black formal attire and white boutonnieres.

Mrs. Jackson, mother of the bride, chose for her daughter's wedding a two piece steel blue lace dress with wrist-length sleeves and slim skirt. She completed her attire with white accessories. The groom's mother wore a pink lace suit with white accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white sweetheart roses.

RECEPTION

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the fellowship room of the church. The bride's table was covered with a white damask cloth and centered with a nine-branched candelabra entwined with daisies and greenery and holding tall glowing tapers. A crystal punch service graced one end of the table and the other held the four-columned wedding cake which was topped with the traditional bride and groom. Crystal compotes held nuts and mints. Those assisting with the serving were the Misses Janice and Brenda Jackson, cousins of the bride, Miss Elizabeth Wilkins and Mrs. Michael Patty, close friends of the bride. Miss Peggy Woods, sorority sister, presided at the guest book.

WEDDING TRIP

The bridal couple left immediately for a short wedding trip to an undisclosed destination and upon their return will be at home at 157 Lexington Avenue, Jackson, Tenn., where both are seniors at Union University. Mrs. Wendell Lee Young

Sharon Ann Jackson Is June Bride of Wendell Lee Young

On the evening of Saturday, June 18, Miss Sharon Ann Jackson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Zelbert T. Jackson, 707 East Kathleen, became the bride of Wendell Lee Young, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Adell Young, Jackson, Tenn.

The Rev. Nick Harris, cousin of the groom, from the Calvary Baptist church, Humboldt, Tenn., and the Rev. James Hackney officiated at the double ring ceremony in the First Baptist church.

CHURCH DECORATIONS

The altar was graced with two arrangements of majestic yellow and white daisies and four candelabrum entwined with greenery and white bows and holding glowing white tapers. A background arch of twelve tapers and greenery enhanced the setting.

WEDDING MUSIC

Preceding the ceremony Miss Lyn Farris, former college roommate of the bride, presented pre-nuptial organ selections and accompanied Miss Shirley Altom, Sunday school teacher of the bride, as she sang "I Love Thee" preceding the ceremony and "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte as the bride and groom knelt at the prieu dieu for the benediction.

GIVEN BY FATHER

To the strains of the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin", the bride entered the sanctuary on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The former Miss Jackson wore a pencil slim floor-length gown of imported silk organza and imported French rose-point lace. The scooped neckline was edged with French cording. The lace was used as a cardinal cape effect and extended in front to the empress waist forming a V effect. A very full train of organza swept to a chapel length. Long sheer sleeves of the organza formed lily points over the hands and were closed with tiny self-covered buttons. The front of the bodice was etched with pearl and sequin embroidery.

She wore a double tiara of seed pearls which secured the elbow-length, three-tiered French imported veil of illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of white majestic daisies centered with a yellow-throated orchid and long white streamers tied in many lovers' knots. The traditional something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue theme was carried out in her accessories.

BRIDE'S ATTENDANTS

Preceding the bride down the aisle was little Miss Letta Beth Williams, Jackson, Tenn., as flower girl and young Mark Varble, Chaffee, as ring bearer. Mrs. Edward Jackson served as her sister-in-law's matron of honor and Miss Joan Dyer, sorority sister from Newburn, Tenn., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Nick Harris, cousin of the groom, Miss Janet Bain and Miss Carol Blankenship, Jackson, Tenn., both sorority sisters of the bride.

The attendants were identically dressed in yellow floor-length sheath frocks of nylon blend crepe with tiny cap sleeves and modified empire waistlines. Headpieces of yellow flowers secured the three-tiered veils of tulle which completed their costumes. Each carried a white lace fan with white and yellow majestic daisies from which fell yellow and green streamers tied in lovers' knots.

BRIDEGROOM'S ATTENDANTS

Young chose as his best man the bride's brother, Edward Jackson, and groomsmen, Donald Harris and Tommy Dacus, Jackson, Tenn., both cousins of the groom. Melvern Wondell, Chaffee, and Ike Palmer, Jackson, fraternity brothers, also served as usher-groomsmen and lighted the candles. All men of the wedding party wore black formal attire and white boutonnieres.

Mrs. Jackson, mother of the bride, chose for her daughter's wedding a two piece steel blue lace dress with wrist-length sleeves and slim skirt. She completed her attire with white accessories. The groom's mother wore a pink lace suit with white accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of white sweetheart roses.

RECEPTION

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the fellowship room of the church. The bride's table was covered with a white damask cloth and centered with a nine-branched candelabra entwined with daisies and greenery and holding tall glowing tapers. A crystal punch service graced one end of the table and the other held the four-columned wedding cake which was topped with the traditional bride and groom. Crystal compotes held nuts and mints. Those assisting with the serving were the Misses Janice and Brenda Jackson, cousins of the bride, Miss Elizabeth Wilkins and Mrs. Michael Patty, close friends of the bride. Miss Peggy Woods, sorority sister, presided at the guest book.

WEDDING TRIP

The bridal couple left immediately for a short wedding trip to an undisclosed destination and upon their return will be at home at 157 Lexington Avenue, Jackson, Tenn., where both are seniors at Union University. For traveling, the new Mrs. Young wore a two piece smoke blue cotton and dacron knit dress with white accessories and the orchid corsage from her bridal bouquet.

Paul Jackson, Paul David Jackson, Rev. W. E. Kauai King Injured

BALTIMORE AP -- Injured Kauai King will be returned to Maryland and retirement. . . Mike Ford will return $280,000 to syndicate members who purchased shares in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner.

Those were the rapid-fire developments after a veterinarian examined Xrays of Kauai King's left front ankle Sunday and said he couldn't guarantee the 3-year-old colt would ever return to top form.

Kauai King, who finished fourth in the Belmont Stakes after winning the first two portions of the Triple Crown, pulled up lame last Saturday after a fifth-place finish in the Arlington Classic.

After being advised of Kauai King's long and possibly uncertain recovery period, Ford announced that the colt would be retired to stud at Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Sagamore Farm just outside Baltimore.

Ford, Kauai King's original sole owner, also reduced from $70,000 to $60,000 the value of each of the 36 shares in the syndicate which was organized after the Belmont.

Ford, who remained the largest stockholder in the syndicate by retaining title to eight shares, said he slashed the price "not as an inducement to stay in the syndicate, but as a show of good faith."

Each member of the syndicate, he told racing editor Bill Boniface of the Baltimore Sunpapers in a telephone interview, "will have the opportunity of getting out completely or taking the drop in price."

Jerold Hoffberger, who organized what will now be a $2,160,000 syndicate, said he had talked with as many syndicate members as he could reach, "and nobody has said he's not going to buy in."

Ford announced his decision after receiving a report from Dr. Raymond Murphy of Laurel, Md.

After examining wet X rays, Ford said, Murphy was "99 per cent sure no bones are fractured. However, he said the suspensories of the leg are pulled pretty bad and much worse than he originally believed."

"Murphy also believes that Kauai King would need from six to eight months in complete retirement to be repaired through blistering," Ford told Boniface, "and then it would take about 120 days more to get him back to the races and there would be the chance of his being beaten by an inferior horse.

"Rather than do that, I just made the decision to retire him."

Koufax Posts 14th Win

ATLANTA AP--Sandy Koufax became the winningest pitcher in the majors Sunday, racking up his fourteenth victory as the Los Angeles Dodgers edged Atlanta 2-1 on Willie Davis' run scoring double in the ninth inning.

Koufax scattered seven hits and struck out 11 in pushing past San Francisco's Juan Marichal, who failed in a bid for his 14th victory Saturday night. Koufax has lost twice.

The winning run was unearned. With one out Maury Wills went all the way to second when shortstop Denis Menke let his grounder get away from him. Clay Carroll then relieved starter Denny Lemaster and hit Wes Parker with a pitch. Davis followed with his double to left-center field.

The Braves tied the score 1-1 in the fifth when Dodger shortstop Maury Wills misplayed Hank Aaron's lazy pop fly and let it drop in for his third hit, allowing Lemaster to score from second.

The biggest crowd ever in Atlanta Stadium, 51,275, turned out for the game.

Jim Ryun Takes Mile in 3:58.6

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK AP -- "We have a real good team -- a team that can beat the Russians -- but I hope no one gets over optimistic."

Stan Wright of Texas Southern, the first Negro coach to head a U. S. men's track and field team in major international competition, made the comment after the National AAU Outdoor Championships Saturday and Sunday at Downing Stadium.

The first two men in each event automatically made the team but others will be added to the squad today to strengthen it for the meets with Poland at Berkeley, Calif., July 16-17 and Russia at Los Angeles July 23-24.

Gerry Lindgren, the NCAA three-mile and six-mile champion, who was forced out of the weekend meet by acute bronchitis, and Tommie Smith, the injured sprint sensation from San Jose State, will be added to the squad.

Other distance runners also will be added so that Uncle Sam's team will be able to send in separate and fresh 5,000 -- and 10,000 -- meter running combinations against the Poles and Russians.

The emphasis will be on beating the Russians and avenging last year's stunning 118-112 point loss at Kiev, Russia. It was the first time in seven meetings the Soviet men had beaten the Yanks in a dual meet.

"The most important thing was getting a place on the team and a chance at the Russians," said 19-year-old Jim Ryun, the star of the meet with his 3.58.6 winning mile. "The meet with the Russians is the second most important meet. The Olympics comes first."

Ryun, who has just finished his freshman year at the University of Kansas, unreeled a spectacular 52.6 final quarter-mile after a slow 3:06 three-quarters, to provide New York with its first outdoor sub-four minute mile.

The 6-foot-2, 160-pound youngster spurted like a sprinter in the final 200 yards to whip veteran Olympian Dyrol Burleson by eight yards with Jim Grelle, another Olympian, slightly behind.

Burleson was timed in four minutes flat and Grele in 4:00.6.

"The pace was too slow," explained Ryun. "I took the lead because nobody wanted it. But there's too much emphasis on time. Winning this was the important thing because it earned me a place on the team that will meet the Russians."

Only three meet records were broken and three tied in the two-day championships but many of the races became tactical battles with the emphasis on finishing one-two instead of records.

The record breakers were Willie Davenport, Cleveland striders, 120-yard high hurdles, 13.3; Air Force Lt. Pat Traynor, 49er Track Club, Los Angeles, 3,000-meter - steeplechase, 8:40.6, and Art Walker, Southern California Striders, 53.8.

The record-tyers were Bob Seagren, S. C. Striders, pole vault, 17-0; Otis Burrell, 49er T. C., Los Angeles, 7-2, and Lee Evans, San Jose, Calif., 440 and 45.8 in the semifinals. Evans, 19, won the final in 45.9.

Ryun's victory was the second gold medal of the meet for Big Eight athletes, as Nebraska's Charlie Greene won the 100 Saturday in 9.4.

John Lawson of Kansas was fourth in the six-mile, and likely will make the U. S. team because both the 5,000 meters and 10,000 will be run against Russia. Conrad Nightingale of Kansas State was sixth in the 3,000 meter steeplechase in 9:03.6.

Peter Scott of Nebraska was fourth in the 880 at 1:48.8, with Oklahoma State's John Perry fifth and teammate Tom Von Ruden eighth.

Dave Crook of Nebraska was fifth in the 440 at 46.8 and Oklahoma's Ron Tull cleared 6-10 but was seventh on more misses en route.

OUTDOOR TIPS

LOON IS AMONG TOURISTS TO MISSOURI

JEFFERSON CITY -- Conservation Department employees here are being treated to the sight and the distinctive sound of a loon -- the feathered symbol of the great northern wilderness -- without leaving their desks.

The loon is a bird of the northern waters, but one specimen apparently decided to spend his summer in Missouri -- a decision being reached by increasing numbers of out-of-state tourists.

There are five ponds on the grounds of the new Conservation Department headquarters here and, while they are not northern, they are waters that are satisfactory to at least this loon. He appeared in early June and shows no inclination to leave. Loons are not uncommon in Missouri in the spring and fall, but in the summer they are rare.

The loon joins a parade of migratory wildlife that has found the ponds and grounds at the headquarters inviting. But although several species of ducks have stopped over, the loon is the first migratory bird to prefer the ponds to his northern breeding grounds.

DEER SEASON WILL BE NOVEMBER 12-18

JEFFERSON CITY -- Missouri's 1966 firearms deer season will be November 12 through 18, with a return to any-deer hunting in most counties north of the Missouri River.

The archery deer season will be the same as last year's -- October 1 through December 15 with deer of either sex legal statewide.

This will be the third any-deer season in most of the northern Missouri counties in five years, with bucks-only hunting permitted prior to 1962 and in 1963 and 1965.

Biologists feel the herd in those highly agricultural counties could grow too fast with annual bucks-only hunting. On the other hand, they said, annual any-deer seasons could produce an overharvest.

Five additional counties near St. Louis will be returned to bucks-only hunting making a total of eight in this area given that status. The purpose of the move is to reduce the harvest near the metropolitan area. Franklin, Jefferson and St. Louis counties were made bucks-only last year and will continue with that restriction this season. The five new counties in the St. Louis area in which only bucks will be legal game are Crawford, Gasconade, Phelps, Warren and Washington.

In a departure from regulations of recent years, the Conservation Commission will require checking of deer taken in those eight St. Louis area counties as well as in all any-deer counties. As in the past, checking will not be required in the other 20 bucks-only counties.

Other counties where bucks only will be legal are Barton, Bates, Cape Girardeau, Cass, Dade, Dunklin, Greene, Henry, Jackson, Jasper, Lafayette, Lawrence, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Pettis, Polk, Saline, Scott, and Vernon.

The new regulations carries only one change in hunting method: this season, deer may not be hunted from a boat with a motor attached. Otherwise, the permitted methods are the same as those last year.

Jim Ryun Takes Mile in 3:58.6

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK AP -- "We have a real good team -- a team that can beat the Russians -- but I hope no one gets over optimistic."

Stan Wright of Texas Southern, the first Negro coach to head a U. S. men's track and field team in major international competition, made the comment after the National AAU Outdoor Championships Saturday and Sunday at Downing Stadium.

The first two men in each event automatically made the team but others will be added to the squad today to strengthen it for the meets with Poland at Berkeley, Calif., July 16-17 and Russia at Los Angeles July 23-24.

Gerry Lindgren, the NCAA three-mile and six-mile champion, who was forced out of the weekend meet by acute bronchitis, and Tommie Smith, the injured sprint sensation from San Jose State, will be added to the squad.

Other distance runners also will be added so that Uncle Sam's team will be able to send in separate and fresh 5,000 -- and 10,000 -- meter running combinations against the Poles and Russians.

The emphasis will be on beating the Russians and avenging last year's stunning 118-112 point loss at Kiev, Russia. It was the first time in seven meetings the Soviet men had beaten the Yanks in a dual meet.

"The most important thing was getting a place on the team and a chance at the Russians," said 19-year-old Jim Ryun, the star of the meet with his 3.58.6 winning mile. "The meet with the Russians is the second most important meet. The Olympics comes first."

Ryun, who has just finished his freshman year at the University of Kansas, unreeled a spectacular 52.6 final quarter-mile after a slow 3:06 three-quarters, to provide New York with its first outdoor sub-four minute mile.

The 6-foot-2, 160-pound youngster spurted like a sprinter in the final 200 yards to whip veteran Olympian Dyrol Burleson by eight yards with Jim Grelle, another Olympian, slightly behind.

Burleson was timed in four minutes flat and Grele in 4:00.6.

"The pace was too slow," explained Ryun. "I took the lead because nobody wanted it. But there's too much emphasis on time. Winning this was the important thing because it earned me a place on the team that will meet the Russians."

Only three meet records were broken and three tied in the two-day championships but many of the races became tactical battles with the emphasis on finishing one-two instead of records.

The record breakers were Willie Davenport, Cleveland striders, 120-yard high hurdles, 13.3; Air Force Lt. Pat Traynor, 49er Track Club, Los Angeles, 3,000-meter - steeplechase, 8:40.6, and Art Walker, Southern California Striders, 53.8.

The record-tyers were Bob Seagren, S. C. Striders, pole vault, 17-0; Otis Burrell, 49er T. C., Los Angeles, 7-2, and Lee Evans, San Jose, Calif., 440 and 45.8 in the semifinals. Evans, 19, won the final in 45.9.

Ryun's victory was the second gold medal of the meet for Big Eight athletes, as Nebraska's Charlie Greene won the 100 Saturday in 9.4.

John Lawson of Kansas was fourth in the six-mile, and likely will make the U. S. team because both the 5,000 meters and 10,000 will be run against Russia. Conrad Nightingale of Kansas State was sixth in the 3,000 meter steeplechase in 9:03.6.

Peter Scott of Nebraska was fourth in the 880 at 1:48.8, with Oklahoma State's John Perry fifth and teammate Tom Von Ruden eighth.

Dave Crook of Nebraska was fifth in the 440 at 46.8 and Oklahoma's Ron Tull cleared 6-10 but was seventh on more misses en route.

OUTDOOR TIPS

LOON IS AMONG TOURISTS TO MISSOURI

JEFFERSON CITY -- Conservation Department employees here are being treated to the sight and the distinctive sound of a loon -- the feathered symbol of the great northern wilderness -- without leaving their desks.

The loon is a bird of the northern waters, but one specimen apparently decided to spend his summer in Missouri -- a decision being reached by increasing numbers of out-of-state tourists.

There are five ponds on the grounds of the new Conservation Department headquarters here and, while they are not northern, they are waters that are satisfactory to at least this loon. He appeared in early June and shows no inclination to leave. Loons are not uncommon in Missouri in the spring and fall, but in the summer they are rare.

The loon joins a parade of migratory wildlife that has found the ponds and grounds at the headquarters inviting. But although several species of ducks have stopped over, the loon is the first migratory bird to prefer the ponds to his northern breeding grounds.

DEER SEASON WILL BE NOVEMBER 12-18

JEFFERSON CITY -- Missouri's 1966 firearms deer season will be November 12 through 18, with a return to any-deer hunting in most counties north of the Missouri River.

The archery deer season will be the same as last year's -- October 1 through December 15 with deer of either sex legal statewide.

This will be the third any-deer season in most of the northern Missouri counties in five years, with bucks-only hunting permitted prior to 1962 and in 1963 and 1965.

Biologists feel the herd in those highly agricultural counties could grow too fast with annual bucks-only hunting. On the other hand, they said, annual any-deer seasons could produce an overharvest.

Five additional counties near St. Louis will be returned to bucks-only hunting making a total of eight in this area given that status. The purpose of the move is to reduce the harvest near the metropolitan area. Franklin, Jefferson and St. Louis counties were made bucks-only last year and will continue with that restriction this season. The five new counties in the St. Louis area in which only bucks will be legal game are Crawford, Gasconade, Phelps, Warren and Washington.

In a departure from regulations of recent years, the Conservation Commission will require checking of deer taken in those eight St. Louis area counties as well as in all any-deer counties. As in the past, checking will not be required in the other 20 bucks-only counties.

Other counties where bucks only will be legal are Barton, Bates, Cape Girardeau, Cass, Dade, Dunklin, Greene, Henry, Jackson, Jasper, Lafayette, Lawrence, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Pettis, Polk, Saline, Scott, and Vernon.

The new regulations carries only one change in hunting method: this season, deer may not be hunted from a boat with a motor attached. Otherwise, the permitted methods are the same as those last year.

Vaccine for Mumps Passes Early Tests

CHICAGO AP -- A new vaccine against mumps appears nearly 100 per cent effective, a scientist reported today -- and his own 8-year-old daughter had a hand in developing it.

She supplied the strain of virus that is "tamed" or attenuated to produce the live-virus vaccine.

The scientist is Dr. Maurice R. Hilleman of the Merck Institute for Therapeutic Research, West Point, Pa. The virus is called the Jeryl Lynn strain, after his daughter who came down with mumps three years ago.

In one test involving school-age and younger children, the vaccine was 98 per cent effective in preventing mumps among children exposed to natural virus infection, Dr. Hilleman told the American Therapeutics Society.

Vaccinated youngsters have shown protective antibodies for as long as seven months, he said, raising hopes that one vaccination may confer life long immunity.

The new vaccine is not yet available for general use. It must undergo broader testing before it can be considered for government license.

Mumps, generally a mild disease, sometimes leads to serious complications, especially in adults.

Dr. Hilleman developed the new vaccine with Dr. Eugene Buynak of Merck. Clinical tests were carried out with Drs. Robert E. Weible and Joseph Stokes Jr., of the University of Pennsylvania, Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and Lankenau Hospital.

In one study near Philadelphia, 402 children were vaccinated between October 1965 and last January, with another 407 studied but not vaccinated. Ninety-eight per cent of vaccinated youngsters developed antibodies, compared with none among the unvaccinated.

The vaccine did not produce any undesirable symptoms of the natural disease, Dr. Hilleman said.

This spring, when mumps spread naturally through the community, 61 per cent of 100 unvaccinated children known to have been exposed to mumps came down with the disease. Only two of 100 vaccinated children got mumps.

The researchers had sought for several years for a strain of mumps virus that could be altered enough so as not to cause the disease, but yet be capable of inducing immunity. The Jeryl Lynn strain met these requirements, they say.

Mention of Castro Missing From Cuban Radio

By THEODORE A. EDIGER

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mention of Fidel Castro has been strangely missing lately in broadcasts over the government-controlled radio in Cuba.

Miami monitors of Havana Cuban prime minister mentioned throughout this week They recalled only sparse mention of him since he was reported inspecting Hurricane Alma's damage June 8.

That contrasts sharply with former daily mention of Castro in newscasts and other reports.

It also coincides with widespread speculation as to Castro's status. Robert McCloskey, U.S. State Department press officer, fanned the conjectures by commenting on Castro's "uncharacteristic silence."

But exiles, often gullible to the numerous rumors about things happening to their enemy No. 1, are mostly wary of this one. They point out that Castro has played hard to find before.

One of the prime minister's most vociferous critics, his sister Juanita, who lives here in self-imposed exile, has remained silent on speculation as to his whereabouts.

Castro, who likes to make speeches, made his last broadcast address on May 1. He called President Johnson "one of the greatest criminals in history." He told his people that Cuba's vital sugar crop would be small.

On June 4, Castro was reported seen on television among officials attending a function at which President Osvaldo Dorticos spoke.

The Citizens Committee for a Free Cuba, a Miami-based group comprised of Americans, said it had reports from good sources that Castro has been undergoing electric - shock medical treatments. It said the reports, from diplomatic quarters and from the Cuban underground, added that a double has been making appearances for Castro.

Dale Quits After College Site Dispute

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Stanley I. Dale, vice president of the trustees of Missouri Western Junior College and a former mayor of St. Joseph, resigned from the board Thursday night in a dispute over the location of a new campus for the school.

Dale was a leader in the campaign which secured approval of a $6-million bond issue for the college in a special election on May 10. He said all the campaign literature indicated it would be located on a tract across Frederick Avenue from the St. Joseph State Hospital and to shift now would be to break faith with the voters.

The trustees voted 5-1 Thursday at a special meeting to reconsider and perhaps choose another location. Dale cast the only dissent.

The Missouri Legislature has agreed to provide sufficient support to convert the college into a four-year school once the new physical facilities are ready.

The trustees voted earlier this year to locate them on the 130-acre tract across from the hospital. It once was part of the hospital grounds, and the Legislature a year ago authorized its sale to the junior college district.

Dr. Thompson E. Potter, president of the trustees, called the special board meeting after State Sen. John E. Downs of St. Joseph issued a statement Monday saying the Frederick Avenue site is too small to allow for growth of the college.

Dale was mayor of St. Joseph from 1950 to 1958. He is a lawyer.

Child Welfare Committee Has Picnic June 20

A picnic given by the Child Welfare Advisory Committee of Scott County was held at Clayton Park on Monday evening, June 20, with approximately 60 persons in attendance.

Guests for the outing were the foster parents and children in the care of Scott County Child Welfare. Other guests included Paul Nelson, Child Welfare Supervisor, and Mrs. Nelson; Charles Simpson, Chairman of Scott County Public Assistance Commission; K. M. Streeter, Commissioner, and Mrs. Streeter; M. E. Gisi, Commissioner; Mrs. Cathleen Gipson, Director of Scott County Welfare, and Gipson; Mrs. Margery Street, Casework Supervisor; Miss Claire Street, Student Trainee; Mrs. Roberta Hubbs, Caseworker; Richard Gemeinhardt, Caseworker, and Mrs. Gemeinhardt; Harris Rodgers, Presiding Judge of Scott County Court, and Mrs. Rodgers; J. E. Childress and Melvin Glueck, Judges of Scott County Court; and Barney George, special investigator.

The Child Welfare Program of Scott County does much in providing for the needs of the children in the area. The child Welfare Advisory Committee is one of the 32 committees in the Missouri. It was organized and the members appointed in January, 1966. Its function is to have particular knowledge of the state plans of service given through the County Welfare Office and to help obtain necessary finances for the needy children.

The members of the committee are: Jim Mac Emerson, chairman, Morley; Mrs. Gwen McDonough, Child Welfare Worker, Morley, Harvey Hubbs, secretary, Sikeston; the Rev. Willard Spencer, Sikeston; Mrs. M. L. Limbaugh, Sikeston; Mrs. W. G. Mason, Oran; Mrs. Melvin Glueck, Illmo; Mrs. Bill Miller, Benton; and Les Lankford, Chaffee.

He said if all young men are given mental and physical examinations when they turn 18 the uncertainties of the draft will be dispelled for many and the country will have a better idea of the physical and mental well-being of its youth.

And if the length of service under draft was lengthened and the length of service shortened for volunteers it could be that voluntary enlistments would be greatly increased.

Mumps, generally a mild disease, sometimes leads to serious complications, especially in adults.

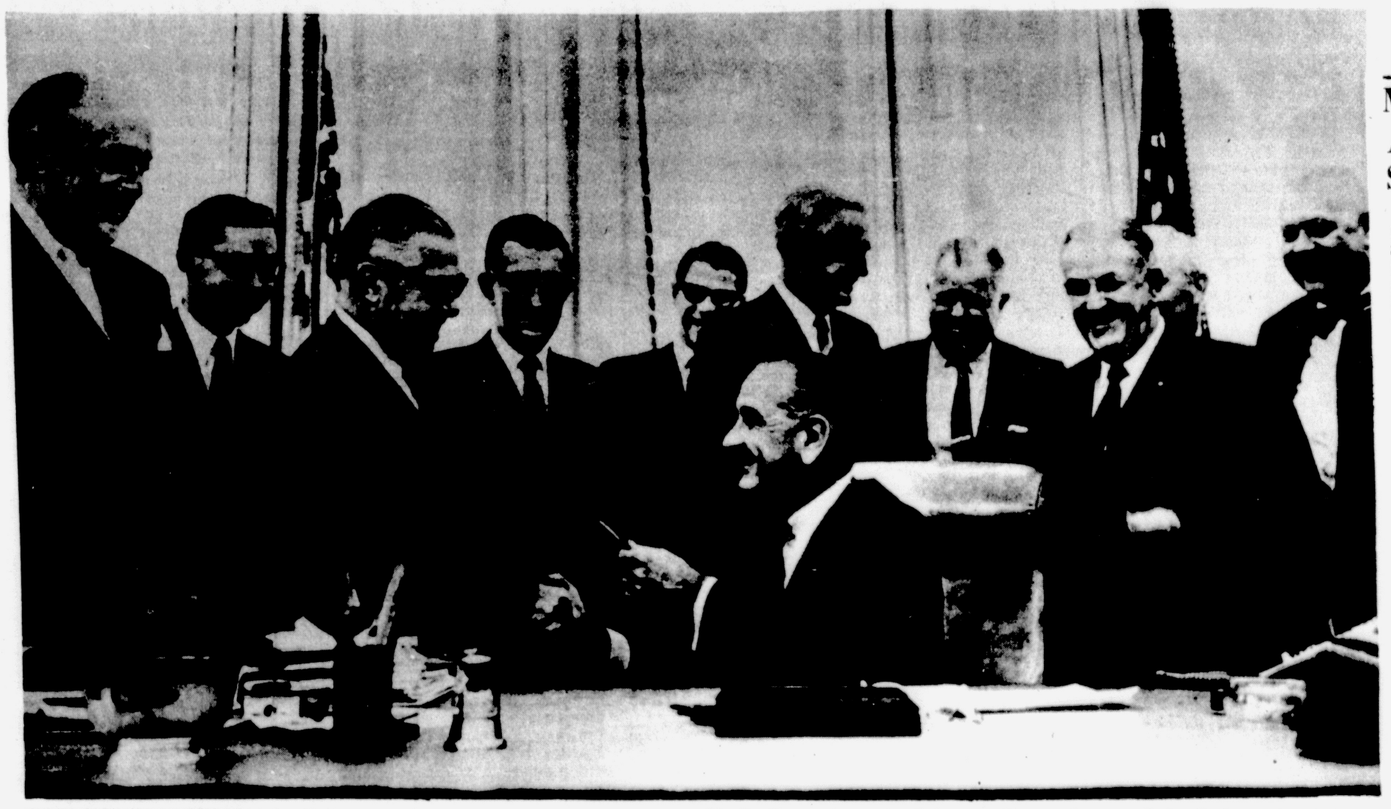

Dr. Hilleman developed the new vaccine with Dr. Eugene Buynak of Merck. Clinical tests were carried out with Drs. Robert E. Weible and Joseph Stokes Jr., of the University of Pennsylvania, Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and Lankenau Hospital.

In one study near Philadelphia, 402 children were vaccinated between October 1965 and last January, with another 407 studied but not vaccinated. Ninety-eight per cent of vaccinated youngsters developed antibodies, compared with none among the unvaccinated.

The vaccine did not produce any undesirable symptoms of the natural disease, Dr. Hilleman said.

This spring, when mumps spread naturally through the community, 61 per cent of 100 unvaccinated children known to have been exposed to mumps came down with the disease. Only two of 100 vaccinated children got mumps.

The researchers had sought for several years for a strain of mumps virus that could be altered enough so as not to cause the disease, but yet be capable of inducing immunity. The Jeryl Lynn strain met these requirements, they say.

Mention of Castro Missing From Cuban Radio

By THEODORE A. EDIGER

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mention of Fidel Castro has been strangely missing lately in broadcasts over the government-controlled radio in Cuba.

Miami monitors of Havana Cuban prime minister mentioned throughout this week They recalled only sparse mention of him since he was reported inspecting Hurricane Alma's damage June 8.

That contrasts sharply with former daily mention of Castro in newscasts and other reports.

It also coincides with widespread speculation as to Castro's status. Robert McCloskey, U.S. State Department press officer, fanned the conjectures by commenting on Castro's "uncharacteristic silence."

But exiles, often gullible to the numerous rumors about things happening to their enemy No. 1, are mostly wary of this one. They point out that Castro has played hard to find before.

One of the prime minister's most vociferous critics, his sister Juanita, who lives here in self-imposed exile, has remained silent on speculation as to his whereabouts.

Castro, who likes to make speeches, made his last broadcast address on May 1. He called President Johnson "one of the greatest criminals in history." He told his people that Cuba's vital sugar crop would be small.

On June 4, Castro was reported seen on television among officials attending a function at which President Osvaldo Dorticos spoke.

The Citizens Committee for a Free Cuba, a Miami-based group comprised of Americans, said it had reports from good sources that Castro has been undergoing electric - shock medical treatments. It said the reports, from diplomatic quarters and from the Cuban underground, added that a double has been making appearances for Castro.

Dale Quits After College Site Dispute

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Stanley I. Dale, vice president of the trustees of Missouri Western Junior College and a former mayor of St. Joseph, resigned from the board Thursday night in a dispute over the location of a new campus for the school.

Dale was a leader in the campaign which secured approval of a $6-million bond issue for the college in a special election on May 10. He said all the campaign literature indicated it would be located on a tract across Frederick Avenue from the St. Joseph State Hospital and to shift now would be to break faith with the voters.

The trustees voted 5-1 Thursday at a special meeting to reconsider and perhaps choose another location. Dale cast the only dissent.

The Missouri Legislature has agreed to provide sufficient support to convert the college into a four-year school once the new physical facilities are ready.

The trustees voted earlier this year to locate them on the 130-acre tract across from the hospital. It once was part of the hospital grounds, and the Legislature a year ago authorized its sale to the junior college district.

Dr. Thompson E. Potter, president of the trustees, called the special board meeting after State Sen. John E. Downs of St. Joseph issued a statement Monday saying the Frederick Avenue site is too small to allow for growth of the college.

Dale was mayor of St. Joseph from 1950 to 1958. He is a lawyer.

Child Welfare Committee Has Picnic June 20

A picnic given by the Child Welfare Advisory Committee of Scott County was held at Clayton Park on Monday evening, June 20, with approximately 60 persons in attendance.

The Child Welfare Program of Scott County does much in providing for the needs of the children in the area. The child Welfare Advisory Committee is one of the 32 committees in the Missouri. It was organized and the members appointed in January, 1966. Its function is to have particular knowledge of the state plans of service given through the County Welfare Office and to help obtain necessary finances for the needy children.

The members of the committee are: Jim Mac Emerson, chairman, Morley; Mrs. Gwen McDonough, Child Welfare Worker, Morley, Harvey Hubbs, secretary, Sikeston; the Rev. Willard Spencer, Sikeston; Mrs. M. L. Limbaugh, Sikeston; Mrs. W. G. Mason, Oran; Mrs. Melvin Glueck, Illmo; Mrs. Bill Miller, Benton; and Les Lankford, Chaffee.

He said if all young men are given mental and physical examinations when they turn 18 the uncertainties of the draft will be dispelled for many and the country will have a better idea of the physical and mental well-being of its youth.

And if the length of service under draft was lengthened and the length of service shortened for volunteers it could be that voluntary enlistments would be greatly increased.

Individual Freedom And The Common Defence

by Walter Millis

FREEDOM AND SEDITION

Such, in brief, were the defenses against sedition and subversion which by 1954 had been erected in the United States. Were they compatible with the requirements of freedom and justice under contemporary world conditions? In attempting an answer one faces not one but two basic issues. The first is general and theoretical: Can a free society enforce such a proscription of a belief, as such, without peril to its freedom? Let it be assumed that the whole system for the suppression of Communists and Communism operates accurately, that all caught in its toils really are Communists at heart, loyal to the faith and to the domestic and international organizations which embody it, as, indeed, a great many unquestionably are. Is such a proscription of belief allowable? Thomas Jefferson, when he drafted the Virginia Statute of Religious Freedom, thought not:

To suffer the civil magistrate to intrude his powers into the field of opinion, and to restrain the possession or propagation of principles on supposition of their ill tendency, is a dangerous fallacy. . . Truth is great and will prevail if left to herself. . . errors ceasing to be dangerous when it is permitted freely to contradict them.

Those who today take the contrary view usually do so on the ground that it is not error which they wish to combat but the conspiracies which it engenders, as Sidney Hook put it in a catchy title: "Heresy, Yes-Conspiracy, No." Yet virtually all heresies -- from the time, if one likes of the early Christian martyrs -- assume some conspiratorial characteristics, and virtually all efforts to suppress heresy have been justified on the ground that it is the conspiracy, not the error, which is the object of the repression. Jesuit missionaries in the England of the Tudors and the Stuarts were hounded primarily as secret agents of a foreign power rather than on the ground that their teachings were erroneous. Sometimes the conspiracies are quite real -- no one can deny that the Catholic plotters under Guy Fawkes introduced actual barrels of gunpowder into the cellar of the House of Commons and came near to destroying the Protestant King and Commons together. Sometimes they are fictions of overheated imagination, like Titus Oates' fantastic allegations, or like the conspiracies to commit murder and child sacrifice described in the celebrated anti-Semitic forgery, "The Protocols of Zion." Sometimes, as seems to have been the case with the heretical "deviations" so savagely suppressed by Stalin in the '30's, real elements of dangerous conspiracy are mingled with the febrile and fearsome inventions of the tyrants and their secret police. The Hook principle, "Conspiracy, No," since it has been invoked in nearly every heresy hunt in history, is of little use in answering the theoretical question.

K.C. Woman Offered Conditional Parole

KANSAS CITY, Kan. AP -- A 22-year-old mother convicted of first-degree manslaughter in the torture death of her 16-day-old son was offered a parole Friday if she would submit to sterilization and psychiatric treatment.

Judge O. Q. Claflin III presented the alternative to Mrs. Cassandra Roy and said she otherwise faced a 5 to 21 year sentence. Mrs. Roy told her attorney she had no objection to the conditions.

Judge Claflin sent Mrs. Roy to the Kansas Industrial Reformatory for Women, where she will be examined by medical personnel from the diagnostic center in Topeka.

Editor to Fight Extradition

JACKSON -- Application for a writ of habeas corpus to prevent the extradition of Jackson newspaper editor Richard R. Canaday to California will be filed in Circuit Court at Jackson, Sen. Albert M. Spradling Jr., his attorney said Friday.

Gov. Warren Hearnes Friday signed extradition papers which would send Mr. Canaday back to California to face two state charges of forgery.

Sen. Spradling said the editor will go before Magistrate Court at Jackson upon receipt of the extradition warrant. There bond will be set and the magistrate, under Missouri law, will allow reasonable time for filing of the suit in Circuit Court.

Mr. Canaday was arrested at Jackson April 5 on a federal warrant charging unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in connection with the charges. The charges were dismissed by the government about two weeks ago along with $2,500 bond which had been filed with federal authoritories.

Mr. Canaday, now editor of the Jackson Post and Cashbook, was at the time of the alleged crimes a commission salesman of advertising for the House Lover's Magazine of El Cerrito, Calif.

The California information charges he collected $63 in commissions for advertising by two ranchers and he forged the ranchers' names.

Eugene G. Buschmann, Missouri administrative hearing commissioner who heard the extradition case, said California law was broad enough to cover what Canaday allegedly did.

Sen. Spradling argued at the hearing May 17 that the papers on which California was relying were not advertising contracts but simply were space reservations.

People Bring New Ideas To Washington Party Scene

By KELLY SMITH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The waiter placed the hunk of beef in the middle of the low coffee-style table. The guest panicked. No forks, no knives, not even a spoon.

The old hands dug in, a la Arabic.

The music started. Longhairs strummed their steel guitars and the chandeliers shook. The guest looked around: two pairs of pajamas on the dance floor.

In Washington nowadays, one doesn't have to attend night after night of similar banquet hall dinners served in the old formal ways. There are new people on the scene who do things differently.

At the Moroccan Embassy, you dine in the king's beach tent.

Ambassador Dr. Ahmed Laraki and his pretty wife, Badia, gave a swinging party for 100 in honor of Ali and Jackie Bengeloun, their predecessors on embassy row.

Cocktails were served indoors, in the striped Moroccan room. Then, mushing over a lawn still damp from rain, guests tiptoed outside to a white canvas marquee, said to be the king's weekend beach retreat.

It's ornate, brocaded gold, red and green interior blended into an Arabian Nights atmosphere: low leather cushions around low brass tables, carpets on the lawn, whole roast lambs, wine, burning incense and conversation in French, English and Arabic.

A belly dancer, imported from a local night club, entertained during dessert.

Inside, the Hangmen, a long-haired combo specializing in gyrations, warmed up.

Barbara Howard, blonde socialite friend of Luci Baines Johnson, wore pajamas. So did Yolande B. Fox, the former Miss America from Alabama.

The retiring ambassador of Amuritania, Ahmed-Bab Miske, is an expressive friendly poet.

Miske and his delicate, French-born wife gave a goodby party in their backyard, Bedouin-style.

Kidney and liver were served hot on long skewers. African music wafted through two authentic striped tents from the Sahara, and guests relaxed sheik-like on low cushions or reclined on Arabian carpets.

"You eat," said the ambassador, "like this." And he pulled apart meat with his fingers, tossing it into his mouth like popcorn.

African and Middle Eastern diplomats may have started a rage of eating with fingers and sitting on the ground — but the Orientals are evening the score. Chopsticks are being served more and more at dinners, as well as the usual utensils. Several private dinners among Japanese diplomats have included the low tables and cushions.

State Water Pollution Board Slates Regulation Hearings

By GEORGE SITTERLEY
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY (A) — The Missouri Water Pollution Board announced Thursday it will hold a series of hearings over the state to determine what water quality regulations should be established on interstate streams.

The standards of water quality will be set up to protect the public health, enhance the quality of the water for public water supplies, fish and wildlife, recreation, agriculture, industry and other legitimate uses, the board said.

The board's engineers have met with water pollution engineers of Iowa, Kansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Oklahoma in an effort to develop basic regulations.

The hearings will be held in circuit court rooms and anyone interested in water quality conditions is urged to attend.

The resultant water quality regulations will be submitted to interior secretary Stewart L. Udall, for final approval.

Dates and locations of hearings include:

Pineville, July 13—Elk River, Buffalo and Lost Creeks.

Forsyth, July 14-White, north fork of the White and Spring Rivers.

Doniphan, July 15 — Black, Current and Eleven Point rivers.

Carthage, Aug. 4—Spring River and Center, Turkey and Shoal creeks.

Nevada, Sept. 15—Osage, Little Osage, Marmaton and Marais des Cygnes rivers.

Kansas City, Sept. 16 — Blue River and Indian Creek.

Maryville, Oct. 13—Missouri River above Kansas City, Nishnabotna, Tarkio, Platte, 102 and Nodaway rivers.

Trenton, Oct. 14 — Grand, Thompson and Chariton rivers.

Memphis, Nov. 17 — Fabius, Fox, Wyaconda, Des Moines and the Mississippi River above St. Louis.

St. Louis, Nov. 18 -- Mississippi River from St. Louis to Cape Girardeau reach.

Kennett, Dec. 9—Mississippi River below Cape Girardeau; St. Francis River and Little River ditches.

Jefferson City, Jan. 20, 1967 —Missouri River below Kansas City.

The board reported good progress is being made in cleaning up Missouri streams, industry generally has been cooperative and cities are forging ahead in sewage treatment plants.

Kansas City will complete construction of its waste treatment plants by Dec. 31. Metropolitan St. Louis sewer district has completed its Missouri River plant and its Mississippi River plants will be completed by the end of 1967.

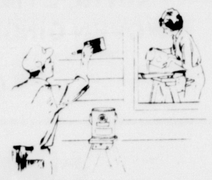

The board said industrial waste problems on Center Creek in Jasper County should be completed within two years. Progress also is being made in eliminating the pollution caused by abandoned strip mines.

Monitoring of stream quality on the Meramec, Castor, Black and St. Francis River watersheds has been intensified because of the boom in mining activity in those areas.

All industries on the Missouri and Mississippi rivers in Missouri now have satisfactory waste treatment facilities, the board said.

In an experiment, albatrosses were taken from their nesting place at Midway Island and released at distant places in the north Pacific. In returning to its nest, one bird covered 3,200 miles in just over 10 days.

Plucky Army Medic His Own Patient

By BOB POOS

NHA TRANG, Viet Nam (AP) — Army medic Tommy Cole aided many wounded men during his 10 months in Viet Nam with the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division. The last one he worked on was himself.

Cole's face, with a field dressing plastered across much of it, became familiar to millions of Americans last January through a series of pictures taken by Associated Press photographer Henri Huet. They were used on the front pages of many American newspapers and one became the cover of Life Magazine.

The 21-year-old medic from Pittsburg, Kan., tended numerous wounded men during the battle of An Thai last Jan. 28 and 29 in spite of the fact that he suffered a bullet crease on his left cheek.

Thursday, Cole's luck ran out after he had taken part in every major battle the 1st Cavalry has had since arriving in Viet Nam. He was severely wounded while on operation near the hamlet of Dong Tre, 255 miles north of Saigon.

"We were approaching the creek bed," Cole said today at the 8th Field Hospital here in Nha Trang, "and fighting broke out. A couple of guys were hit and one of them, a sergeant, was thrashing around on the ground and screaming for a medic.

"I started running down to help him and I felt something hit me and spin me around and the next thing I knew my face was hitting the gravel."

"My left arm was bleeding pretty bad," Cole said, "and one of the guys put a tourniquet on it."

Hiding behind some rocks, Cole further adjusted the tourniquet and kept it tight.

"If it hadn't been for Roy there, I never would have gotten out of that place and neither would have several other guys," Cole said.

He referred to Spec. 4 Roy V. Taylor Jr., 22, of Kirbyville, Tex.

Taylor, himself hit in one arm, dragged Cole and some other wounded men away from the bullet swept creek bed.

Cole, also a Spec. 4, had extended his enlistment to stay with his buddies in the 2nd battalion of the 7th Cavalry.

"My mother got kind of put out with me for doing it," he said, "but I didn't want to leave the rest of the guys here."

He volunteered to go on this last operation in spite of the fact that he had less than two weeks to serve in Viet Nam and could have remained back at the base camp in An Khe.

The platoon Cole was with was ambushed by two or more snipers armed with automatic weapons. They killed several Americans and wounded more.

The young medic saw action for the first time last November during the bloody fighting in the Ia Drang valley. He tended many wounded during the battle but was not wounded himself.

He wasn't quite as lucky at An Thai when the bullet creased his face but he had only a short stay in the hospital. He was credited with saving several lives in spite of the handicap of his wound and a bandage that half blinded him.

Cole remarked: "I feel like I belong with these guys. I feel like I'm really doing something here. I don't really get into the fighting you know. I'm only a medic. Maybe I'll ask to be a rifleman some day."

Sunday, Cole goes home. He and a score of other seriously wounded will fly first to a hospital at Clark Air Base in the Philippines and then on to the United States.

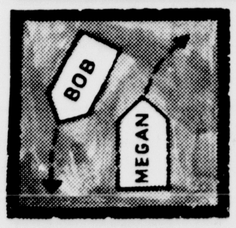

Some like Cole have been in the heat, mud, filth and terror of infantry fighting in Viet Nam for almost a year.

Individual Freedom And The Common Defence

by Walter Millis

FREEDOM AND SEDITION

Such, in brief, were the defenses against sedition and subversion which by 1954 had been erected in the United States. Were they compatible with the requirements of freedom and justice under contemporary world conditions? In attempting an answer one faces not one but two basic issues. The first is general and theoretical: Can a free society enforce such a proscription of a belief, as such, without peril to its freedom? Let it be assumed that the whole system for the suppression of Communists and Communism operates accurately, that all caught in its toils really are Communists at heart, loyal to the faith and to the domestic and international organizations which embody it, as, indeed, a great many unquestionably are. Is such a proscription of belief allowable? Thomas Jefferson, when he drafted the Virginia Statute of Religious Freedom, thought not:

To suffer the civil magistrate to intrude his powers into the field of opinion, and to restrain the possession or propagation of principles on supposition of their ill tendency, is a dangerous fallacy. . . Truth is great and will prevail if left to herself. . . errors ceasing to be dangerous when it is permitted freely to contradict them.

Those who today take the contrary view usually do so on the ground that it is not error which they wish to combat but the conspiracies which it engenders, as Sidney Hook put it in a catchy title: "Heresy, Yes-Conspiracy, No." Yet virtually all heresies -- from the time, if one likes of the early Christian martyrs -- assume some conspiratorial characteristics, and virtually all efforts to suppress heresy have been justified on the ground that it is the conspiracy, not the error, which is the object of the repression. Jesuit missionaries in the England of the Tudors and the Stuarts were hounded primarily as secret agents of a foreign power rather than on the ground that their teachings were erroneous. Sometimes the conspiracies are quite real -- no one can deny that the Catholic plotters under Guy Fawkes introduced actual barrels of gunpowder into the cellar of the House of Commons and came near to destroying the Protestant King and Commons together. Sometimes they are fictions of overheated imagination, like Titus Oates' fantastic allegations, or like the conspiracies to commit murder and child sacrifice described in the celebrated anti-Semitic forgery, "The Protocols of Zion." Sometimes, as seems to have been the case with the heretical "deviations" so savagely suppressed by Stalin in the '30's, real elements of dangerous conspiracy are mingled with the febrile and fearsome inventions of the tyrants and their secret police. The Hook principle, "Conspiracy, No," since it has been invoked in nearly every heresy hunt in history, is of little use in answering the theoretical question.

K.C. Woman Offered Conditional Parole

KANSAS CITY, Kan. AP -- A 22-year-old mother convicted of first-degree manslaughter in the torture death of her 16-day-old son was offered a parole Friday if she would submit to sterilization and psychiatric treatment.

Judge O. Q. Claflin III presented the alternative to Mrs. Cassandra Roy and said she otherwise faced a 5 to 21 year sentence. Mrs. Roy told her attorney she had no objection to the conditions.

Judge Claflin sent Mrs. Roy to the Kansas Industrial Reformatory for Women, where she will be examined by medical personnel from the diagnostic center in Topeka.

Editor to Fight Extradition

JACKSON -- Application for a writ of habeas corpus to prevent the extradition of Jackson newspaper editor Richard R. Canaday to California will be filed in Circuit Court at Jackson, Sen. Albert M. Spradling Jr., his attorney said Friday.

Gov. Warren Hearnes Friday signed extradition papers which would send Mr. Canaday back to California to face two state charges of forgery.

Sen. Spradling said the editor will go before Magistrate Court at Jackson upon receipt of the extradition warrant. There bond will be set and the magistrate, under Missouri law, will allow reasonable time for filing of the suit in Circuit Court.

Mr. Canaday was arrested at Jackson April 5 on a federal warrant charging unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in connection with the charges. The charges were dismissed by the government about two weeks ago along with $2,500 bond which had been filed with federal authoritories.

Mr. Canaday, now editor of the Jackson Post and Cashbook, was at the time of the alleged crimes a commission salesman of advertising for the House Lover's Magazine of El Cerrito, Calif.

The California information charges he collected $63 in commissions for advertising by two ranchers and he forged the ranchers' names.

Eugene G. Buschmann, Missouri administrative hearing commissioner who heard the extradition case, said California law was broad enough to cover what Canaday allegedly did.

Sen. Spradling argued at the hearing May 17 that the papers on which California was relying were not advertising contracts but simply were space reservations.

People Bring New Ideas To Washington Party Scene

By KELLY SMITH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The waiter placed the hunk of beef in the middle of the low coffee-style table. The guest panicked. No forks, no knives, not even a spoon.

The old hands dug in, a la Arabic.

The music started. Longhairs strummed their steel guitars and the chandeliers shook. The guest looked around: two pairs of pajamas on the dance floor.

In Washington nowadays, one doesn't have to attend night after night of similar banquet hall dinners served in the old formal ways. There are new people on the scene who do things differently.

At the Moroccan Embassy, you dine in the king's beach tent.

Ambassador Dr. Ahmed Laraki and his pretty wife, Badia, gave a swinging party for 100 in honor of Ali and Jackie Bengeloun, their predecessors on embassy row.

Cocktails were served indoors, in the striped Moroccan room. Then, mushing over a lawn still damp from rain, guests tiptoed outside to a white canvas marquee, said to be the king's weekend beach retreat.

It's ornate, brocaded gold, red and green interior blended into an Arabian Nights atmosphere: low leather cushions around low brass tables, carpets on the lawn, whole roast lambs, wine, burning incense and conversation in French, English and Arabic.

A belly dancer, imported from a local night club, entertained during dessert.

Inside, the Hangmen, a long-haired combo specializing in gyrations, warmed up.

Barbara Howard, blonde socialite friend of Luci Baines Johnson, wore pajamas. So did Yolande B. Fox, the former Miss America from Alabama.

The retiring ambassador of Amuritania, Ahmed-Bab Miske, is an expressive friendly poet.

Miske and his delicate, French-born wife gave a goodby party in their backyard, Bedouin-style.

Kidney and liver were served hot on long skewers. African music wafted through two authentic striped tents from the Sahara, and guests relaxed sheik-like on low cushions or reclined on Arabian carpets.

"You eat," said the ambassador, "like this." And he pulled apart meat with his fingers, tossing it into his mouth like popcorn.

African and Middle Eastern diplomats may have started a rage of eating with fingers and sitting on the ground — but the Orientals are evening the score. Chopsticks are being served more and more at dinners, as well as the usual utensils. Several private dinners among Japanese diplomats have included the low tables and cushions.

State Water Pollution Board Slates Regulation Hearings

By GEORGE SITTERLEY
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY (A) — The Missouri Water Pollution Board announced Thursday it will hold a series of hearings over the state to determine what water quality regulations should be established on interstate streams.

The standards of water quality will be set up to protect the public health, enhance the quality of the water for public water supplies, fish and wildlife, recreation, agriculture, industry and other legitimate uses, the board said.

The board's engineers have met with water pollution engineers of Iowa, Kansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas and Oklahoma in an effort to develop basic regulations.

The hearings will be held in circuit court rooms and anyone interested in water quality conditions is urged to attend.

The resultant water quality regulations will be submitted to interior secretary Stewart L. Udall, for final approval.

Dates and locations of hearings include:

Pineville, July 13—Elk River, Buffalo and Lost Creeks.

Forsyth, July 14-White, north fork of the White and Spring Rivers.

Doniphan, July 15 — Black, Current and Eleven Point rivers.

Carthage, Aug. 4—Spring River and Center, Turkey and Shoal creeks.

Nevada, Sept. 15—Osage, Little Osage, Marmaton and Marais des Cygnes rivers.

Kansas City, Sept. 16 — Blue River and Indian Creek.

Maryville, Oct. 13—Missouri River above Kansas City, Nishnabotna, Tarkio, Platte, 102 and Nodaway rivers.

Trenton, Oct. 14 — Grand, Thompson and Chariton rivers.

Memphis, Nov. 17 — Fabius, Fox, Wyaconda, Des Moines and the Mississippi River above St. Louis.

St. Louis, Nov. 18 -- Mississippi River from St. Louis to Cape Girardeau reach.

Kennett, Dec. 9—Mississippi River below Cape Girardeau; St. Francis River and Little River ditches.

Jefferson City, Jan. 20, 1967 —Missouri River below Kansas City.

The board reported good progress is being made in cleaning up Missouri streams, industry generally has been cooperative and cities are forging ahead in sewage treatment plants.

Kansas City will complete construction of its waste treatment plants by Dec. 31. Metropolitan St. Louis sewer district has completed its Missouri River plant and its Mississippi River plants will be completed by the end of 1967.

The board said industrial waste problems on Center Creek in Jasper County should be completed within two years. Progress also is being made in eliminating the pollution caused by abandoned strip mines.

Monitoring of stream quality on the Meramec, Castor, Black and St. Francis River watersheds has been intensified because of the boom in mining activity in those areas.

All industries on the Missouri and Mississippi rivers in Missouri now have satisfactory waste treatment facilities, the board said.

In an experiment, albatrosses were taken from their nesting place at Midway Island and released at distant places in the north Pacific. In returning to its nest, one bird covered 3,200 miles in just over 10 days.

School for Disturbed Sends Most Graduates to College

By DAVID NYHAN

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — A school for pupils from a hospital for the emotionally disturbed is sending more than half its graduates on to college, where they hope to match the records of last year's seniors.

It is the Arlington School, on the grounds of McLean Hospital, a division of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Dr. Francis de Marneffe called the school "one of the most successful ventures ever undertaken by the hospital" in his commencement address Thursday.

He is director of the hospital, where the experiment in the education of the emotionally disturbed started five years ago. Since then, 25 of the 75 graduates have gone to college.

All eleven seniors graduated Thursday, and seven of them look forward to college careers. Of the same number who went on last year, six of them posted averages of "C" or better.

Headmaster John F. Dunn believes the school is the only one of its type in the country — a college preparatory course with regular teachers and structured classes, operating in a hospital.

Dunn said he has agreed not to disclose the names of the colleges which have accepted the students.

The emphasis is on education, in an island of normalcy, Dunn says, "and while we are happy if therapy occurs, our emphasis is on learning."

Housed in the ten-room home of a wealthy former patient, the school got started with $20,000 in hospital funds and a matching grant from the Ford Foundation.

There are six full-time teachers, average age 26, who are "doers, Peace Corps types," Dunn said.

"They are not trained in therapy, and do not manipulate the students, but concentrate on teaching."

There are 35 regular students and 10 who are tutored.

Recent Bride Is Honored With Shower

Miss Suzanne Gilmore, who became the bride of Jim Green of Ferguson June 11, was honored with a bridal shower May 30 at the home of Mrs. Jim Moore, 912 North Kingshighway. Mrs. Tony Heckemeyer was co-hostess.

Flowers were used in decorating throughout the house. The refreshment table was decorated with blue and white flowers in a three tiered arranger and silver compotes held nuts and mints. Punch and coffee were served from silver servers. A five branched candelabra also graced the table.

A large wedding bell was the central decoration on the gift table.

There were 54 invited guests.

Moby Dick Never Had It This Good

By DALE NELSON

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — When Edward I. Griffin talked to a high school class studying Herman Melville's "Moby Dick," he summed up his lecture, and a lot more, in eight words:

"Ahab had his whale, and I have mine."

A year has passed since Ted Griffin's whale swam into a salmon net near the cannery town from which he whale would take his name — Namu, B.C.

In that year, Namu has become the main attraction of Griffin's Seattle Public Aquarium, starred in a movie, been the focus of a civic controversy, undergone an electrocardiogram, put on weight, and made money for Griffin.

Namu is a killer whale. Griffin bought him for $8,000 from his fisherman captors and had him towed here in a pen.

At the aquarium on Elliott Bay, Namu puts on five shows a day, alternating with a trained seal act. His biggest crowd-pleaser is a turn in which he leaps from the water for a salmon which Griffin dangles from a tower. The whale's owner, wearing a plastic suit, also goes bareback riding on his whale.

Namu spent the winter behind a submarine net in Rich Cove, across Puget Sound, where scenes were shot for the movie, "Namu the Killer Whale."

How do you measure a whale's heartbeat? Dr. Merrill P. Spencer of Seattle's Virginia Mason Foundation for Medical Education and Research did it with a plumber's friend. A suction cup, equipped with sensors connected to a recorder, was stuck on Namu's chest.

Griffin figures Namu is about 8 or 10 years old. The whale is 25 feet long, three feet longer than when captured. Its weight was estimated at four tons a year ago. To arrive at the weight of a whale, you measure the girth at strategic points and then calculate the water displacement. When Namu got up to six tons a few months ago, its diet was cut from 400 pounds of salmon a day to 325 pounds.

Killer whales enter Puget Sound when the salmon are running, and anyone seeing one is asked to telephone the aquarium collect. Griffin wants a mate for Namu.

Farson told the International Design Conference that other constitutional rights will include the right to intimacy, sexual fulfillment, travel, study, altruism and leisure.

New Policy Asks West Germans To Be Friendly

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN, Germany AP -- Instructions have gone out to many West German officials to quit being standoffish with their counterparts from East Germany.

West Germany does not officially recognize the existence of the East German Communist state but the facts of life require many kinds of contacts. There are dozens of informal agreements covering everything from alloy steel shipments to zip code numbers, and including what to do about young men who leave illegitimate babies in the East and make off to the West.

West German officials have been under orders to keep strictly to business when dealing with their opposite numbers and not to get into political discussions.

The new instructions, approved by Chancellor Ludwig Erhard and his Cabinet, point out that the Communists have instructions to talk about politics. West Germans need dodge the subject no longer.

"It is expected," they were told, "that in such discussions you will objectively and firmly represent the free system laid down in the constitutions of the Federal Republic and its member states."

The West Germans are advised to argue emphatically that Germans have not reconciled themselves to the division of the country or to Communist rule in the East.

The new instructions are part of Erhard's policy of seeking contracts of all kinds with the 17 million Germans under Communist rule.

Full-scale reunification of the country looks no closer than it has since World War II.

School for Disturbed Sends Most Graduates to College

By DAVID NYHAN

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — A school for pupils from a hospital for the emotionally disturbed is sending more than half its graduates on to college, where they hope to match the records of last year's seniors.

It is the Arlington School, on the grounds of McLean Hospital, a division of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Dr. Francis de Marneffe called the school "one of the most successful ventures ever undertaken by the hospital" in his commencement address Thursday.

He is director of the hospital, where the experiment in the education of the emotionally disturbed started five years ago. Since then, 25 of the 75 graduates have gone to college.

All eleven seniors graduated Thursday, and seven of them look forward to college careers. Of the same number who went on last year, six of them posted averages of "C" or better.

Headmaster John F. Dunn believes the school is the only one of its type in the country — a college preparatory course with regular teachers and structured classes, operating in a hospital.

Dunn said he has agreed not to disclose the names of the colleges which have accepted the students.

The emphasis is on education, in an island of normalcy, Dunn says, "and while we are happy if therapy occurs, our emphasis is on learning."

Housed in the ten-room home of a wealthy former patient, the school got started with $20,000 in hospital funds and a matching grant from the Ford Foundation.

There are six full-time teachers, average age 26, who are "doers, Peace Corps types," Dunn said.

"They are not trained in therapy, and do not manipulate the students, but concentrate on teaching."

There are 35 regular students and 10 who are tutored.

Recent Bride Is Honored With Shower

Miss Suzanne Gilmore, who became the bride of Jim Green of Ferguson June 11, was honored with a bridal shower May 30 at the home of Mrs. Jim Moore, 912 North Kingshighway. Mrs. Tony Heckemeyer was co-hostess.

Flowers were used in decorating throughout the house. The refreshment table was decorated with blue and white flowers in a three tiered arranger and silver compotes held nuts and mints. Punch and coffee were served from silver servers. A five branched candelabra also graced the table.

A large wedding bell was the central decoration on the gift table.

There were 54 invited guests.

Moby Dick Never Had It This Good

By DALE NELSON

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — When Edward I. Griffin talked to a high school class studying Herman Melville's "Moby Dick," he summed up his lecture, and a lot more, in eight words:

"Ahab had his whale, and I have mine."

A year has passed since Ted Griffin's whale swam into a salmon net near the cannery town from which he whale would take his name— Namu, B.C.

In that year, Namu has become the main attraction of Griffin's Seattle Public Aquarium, starred in a movie, been the focus of a civic controversy, undergone an electrocardiogram, put on weight, and made money for Griffin.

Namu is a killer whale. Griffin bought him for $8,000 from his fisherman captors and had him towed here in a pen.

At the aquarium on Elliott Bay, Namu puts on five shows a day, alternating with a trained seal act. His biggest crowd-pleaser is a turn in which he leaps from the water for a salmon which Griffin dangles from a tower. The whale's owner, wearing a plastic suit, also goes bareback riding on his whale.

Namu spent the winter behind a submarine net in Rich Cove, across Puget Sound, where scenes were shot for the movie, "Namu the Killer Whale."

How do you measure a whale's heartbeat? Dr. Merrill P. Spencer of Seattle's Virginia Mason Foundation for Medical Education and Research did it with a plumber's friend. A suction cup, equipped with sensors connected to a recorder, was stuck on Namu's chest.

Griffin figures Namu is about 8 or 10 years old. The whale is 25 feet long, three feet longer than when captured. Its weight was estimated at four tons a year ago. To arrive at the weight of a whale, you measure the girth at strategic points and then calculate the water displacement. When Namu got up to six tons a few months ago, its diet was cut from 400 pounds of salmon a day to 325 pounds.

Killer whales enter Puget Sound when the salmon are running, and anyone seeing one is asked to telephone the aquarium collect. Griffin wants a mate for Namu.

Bill of Rights Additions

ASPEN, Colo. AP -- The Bill of Rights will in time be broadened to include the right to health and the right to be different, says Dr. Richard Farson, director of the Western Behavioral Sciences Institute, La Jolla, Calif.

Farson told the International Design Conference that other constitutional rights will include the right to intimacy, sexual fulfillment, travel, study, altruism and leisure.

New Policy Asks West Germans To Be Friendly

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN, Germany AP -- Instructions have gone out to many West German officials to quit being standoffish with their counterparts from East Germany.

West Germany does not officially recognize the existence of the East German Communist state but the facts of life require many kinds of contacts. There are dozens of informal agreements covering everything from alloy steel shipments to zip code numbers, and including what to do about young men who leave illegitimate babies in the East and make off to the West.

West German officials have been under orders to keep strictly to business when dealing with their opposite numbers and not to get into political discussions.

The new instructions, approved by Chancellor Ludwig Erhard and his Cabinet, point out that the Communists have instructions to talk about politics. West Germans need dodge the subject no longer.

"It is expected," they were told, "that in such discussions you will objectively and firmly represent the free system laid down in the constitutions of the Federal Republic and its member states."

The West Germans are advised to argue emphatically that Germans have not reconciled themselves to the division of the country or to Communist rule in the East.

The new instructions are part of Erhard's policy of seeking contracts of all kinds with the 17 million Germans under Communist rule.

Full-scale reunification of the country looks no closer than it has since World War II.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Your remarks and the column you printed by Will Jones of Minneapolis was the most effective bit of writing against cigaret smoking I have ever read. It beats the Surgeon General's report to pieces.

I am a woman who has smoked at least two packs a day for over 18 years. When I was a teen-ager I sneaked cigarets behind my parents backs. I was never without gum or mints in my mouth when I arrived home from school. When my mother found a pack of cigarets in my purse I said I was carrying them for a friend.

My husband has asked me to quit smoking but I insisted it was a symbol of my independence and I would not allow him to dominate me. My children have begged me to quit because they heard cigarets can make people sick.

The day I read the description of how cigaret smokers look to non-smokers I threw my cigarets in the garbage can and swore off for life. I'm sure I shall never smoke another as long as I live. Thanks a million. -- FREE AT LAST

Dear Free: Thank you, but not all readers share your enthusiasm for my comments. Please read on:

Ann Landers: I am not calling you "dear" because you are an idiot and a troublemaker. Why don't you go out and play in the traffic?

That column on cigaret smoking was an insult to millions of Americans. I, for one, demand an apology.

I am an attractive, well-groomed, well-mannered woman of 45. My friends consider me immaculate. I am neither ill-bred, ill-mannered, nor inconsiderate. My clothes do not stink and I resent being told that I stink up the world around me.

Men and women have been smoking for centuries and they are going to continue to smoke in spite of Ann Landers and that screwball in Minneapolis, the Surgeon General, the family doctor and the handful of nuts who are trying to make it illegal. Why? Because smoking is a source of relaxation and in this hectic world people need it to survive. -- NICOTINE ADDICT WHO ENJOYS EVERY PUFF

Dear Addict: I hope you are one who WILL survive. Some haven't -- and the list is getting longer all the time.

Good luck to you -- and the longer you smoke, the more you'll need it.

Dear Ann: Will Jones is right. It IS a smoker's world. And it's going to continue to be a smoker's world. So why doesn't he get out of it? --SOUTH BENDER

Dear Ann: Your and that gink in Minneapolis are both nuts. Can you imagine phoning friends to invite them to a party in your home and asking them if they smoke? And if they say "Yes" --telling them to stay home? It's insane. -- MADISON MRS.

Dear Ann: Why don't you and Jones go live in Russia? You'd make great dictators. -- NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT

Dear Ann Landers: I resent the remarks by that loon in Minneapolis. So he hates women smokers, does he? He sounds like a maniac who must be on something stronger than cigarets.

We must all overlook faults in other people. If Will Jones so despises women smokers that he would tear a cigaret from a woman's mouth then why does he take her out? I'd like to hear his answer to this question. -- PEACE PIPE

Dear Pipe: So would I. How about it, Will, baby? If you'll write it, I'll print it.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting -- And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 25¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Your remarks and the column you printed by Will Jones of Minneapolis was the most effective bit of writing against cigaret smoking I have ever read. It beats the Surgeon General's report to pieces.

I am a woman who has smoked at least two packs a day for over 18 years. When I was a teen-ager I sneaked cigarets behind my parents backs. I was never without gum or mints in my mouth when I arrived home from school. When my mother found a pack of cigarets in my purse I said I was carrying them for a friend.

My husband has asked me to quit smoking but I insisted it was a symbol of my independence and I would not allow him to dominate me. My children have begged me to quit because they heard cigarets can make people sick.

The day I read the description of how cigaret smokers look to non-smokers I threw my cigarets in the garbage can and swore off for life. I'm sure I shall never smoke another as long as I live. Thanks a million. -- FREE AT LAST

Dear Free: Thank you, but not all readers share your enthusiasm for my comments. Please read on:

Lilbourn Kiwanis Hears Communication Talk

LILBOURN -- A demonstration of what is being done and what is expected to develop in the field of communications was presented by Roy Wickerham of the Bell Telephone Co. at the Kiwanis Club meeting Thursday night.

A special potluck dinner was arranged for the meeting so the women could attend.

A call was made for a report from the committee on the proposed nursing home. Since certain legal matters relating to obtaining a site have not yet been cleared, the committee preferred to make no particular comments at that time.

A report was made that the survey committee to determine if the community could support another doctor, was working and would have the job finished within a few days. The results of the survey will be sent to the Sears Roebuck Foundation, which works closely with the American Legion Association, to help small communities obtain a doctor.

About 2.9 million youngsters participated in supervised youth baseball competition in 1965.

SEASON'S STAMP — "Madonna and Child with Angels" by Flemish Renaissance master Hans Memling will be reproduced in five colors for the 1966 Christmas stamp. Anticipating another seasonal best seller, the Post Office Department has ordered an initial printing of 1 billion, 200 million. First-day issue will be Nov. 1 at Christmas, Mich.

Helen Keller Observes Special Day Today

EASTON, Conn. (AP)—Today was a special day in the life of Helen Keller, a woman whose life has been filled with special days.

It was 86 years ago today that she was born in Tuscumbia, Ala. Nineteen months after she was born she was struck deaf and blind.

The story of her triumph over these infirmities has been an inspiration to those similarly afflicted, as well as those who have read her many books or seen the movies or plays based on her life.

After spending most of her life working tirelessly to better the conditions of the blind and deaf, Miss Keller retired to a rural retreat in western Connecticut.

Her immediate family and a small group of intimate friends helped Miss Keller celebrate her birthday at Arcan Ridge, her country home.

Seeing-Eye Dog Found to Be Almost as Blind as Master

DETROIT AP -- Hesitancy at the end of the leash told Jack McAdams, 23, something was wrong.

It turned out, the blind was leading the blind.

McAdams' dog, Dell, was guiding him through downtown Detroit streets on a rainy April day when he sensed indecision on the dog's part.

A veterinarian discovered that Dell, a 7-year-old Doberman Pinscher, was as blind as her master and had been leading him "on instinct and guts alone."

Dell had cataracts, a malady common to both humans and dogs. The lenses of her eyes were so fogged she barely could distinguish light from darkness.

Fortunately dogs have a second set of lenses, though an operation to remove the defective set costs $350. And no one could promise McAdams what the results of the operation would be.

McAdams had trained Dell since she was a puppy. He felt he just couldn't let her down. A short - wave radio operator, McAdams told other hams about his and Dell's plight. The operation money rolled in and there was transportation to take Dell to a clinic.

Two weeks ago Dr. William Magrane of Mishawaka, Ind., removed Dell's clouded lenses. Thursday the stitches inside her eyelids were removed.

Dell had trouble shaking off effects of the anesthetic, because she is a canine diabetic. It was discovered three years ago the dog was a diabetic, but she takes her insulin quite obligingly.

"I shout, 'Here Dell, time for your shot,' and she comes trotting up," McAdams said. "My mother gives her the needle. We have never had any trouble."

But after the eye operation, "she lay there for hours, like she was dead," said Onelte Robinson, McAdams' mother and a nurse at Doctors Hospital, who made Dell her special patient through the dog's ordeal.

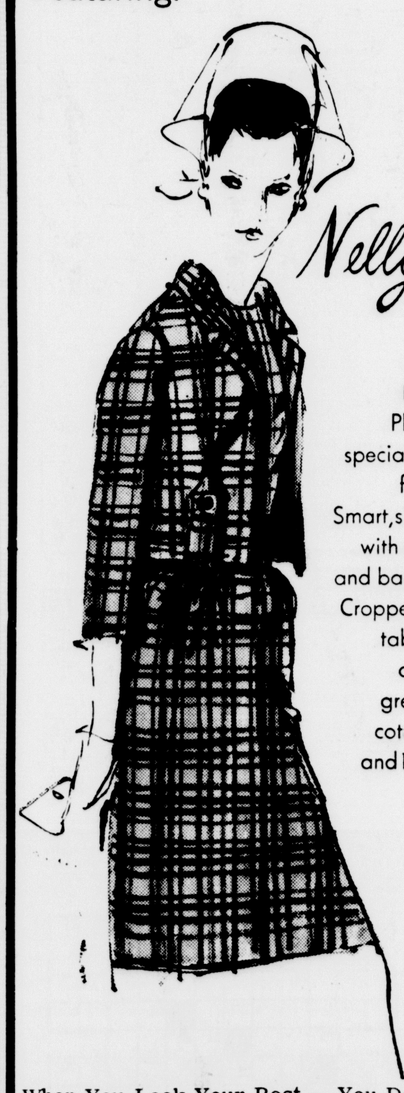

Mrs. Robinson says Dell is starting to look better. "Her coat is coming back and she is beginning to scamper around the house again."

McAdams knows Dell can see again, even without a veterinarian's assurance. He can feel a more confident tug on the leash.

Helen Keller Observes Special Day Today

EASTON, Conn. (AP)—Today was a special day in the life of Helen Keller, a woman whose life has been filled with special days.

It was 86 years ago today that she was born in Tuscumbia, Ala. Nineteen months after she was born she was struck deaf and blind.

The story of her triumph over these infirmities has been an inspiration to those similarly afflicted, as well as those who have read her many books or seen the movies or plays based on her life.

After spending most of her life working tirelessly to better the conditions of the blind and deaf, Miss Keller retired to a rural retreat in western Connecticut.

Her immediate family and a small group of intimate friends helped Miss Keller celebrate her birthday at Arcan Ridge, her country home.
